

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – Regular Season Review

I. General

We made it to week 13! There were points in the season that it didn't look likely. Thank you all for your cooperation in some of the changes and protocols we've needed to produce in-season to keep everything going and competitive.

And competitive it was. Everyone was in with a shout of the playoffs with three games remaining and only one out of it (Mike) with one crucial match to play.

Congratulations must go to Dave, Mike, Rich and Neil. You're all in with a shout of drafting a 'once in a generation' QB!

Alex needs to be commended for his taking the No. 1 spot quite comfortably. The opening 6 game winning streak secured him a playoff spot in Week 6 (in hindsight) and effectively cast everyone adrift. Ross must also be congratulated for not only coming second but also being our top scorer by nearly 70 points and averaged just under 140 points per matchup.

II. Hot Chubb Time Machine (Alex) – Pick #1 – Seed #1

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |              |            |              |            |          | High   | Low   |
|---|---|--------------|--------------|------------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|-------|
|   |   | For          | Against      | Diff       | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |       |
| 9 | 4 | 1,713.34 (3) | 1,581.38 (2) | 131.96 (2) | 2,064.58 (3) | 351.24 (5) | 83.0 (5) | 156.48 | 75.14 |

Picking from the #1 spot, it is unsurprising that the 2019 stud RB, Christian McCaffrey, ended up on Alex's team. What was surprising is how little Alex's got to use him. Unfortunately for his opponents it looks like a fresh CMC is back for the playoff run.

Alex had a league power ranking of 98 (of 100) which put him second in the league for the season. He slightly exceeded expectations by coming first. Alex made very few changes to his team through trades, only making one trade late in the season. Why would he need to trade a winning team?

Alex was a model of consistency and his players matched this. His players were rarely the top scoring in any one position only picking up 8 of these weekly awards, predominantly at kicker (3). Likewise he didn't leave that many points on his bench only taking the weekly 'awards' 9 times, 5 times at QB. Despite taking the league he only won best manager once but was never worst manager.

Going into the playoffs with a bye and having CMC back puts Alex in a strong position to take the championship belt. His end of season form was patchy though and with his lowest points score in week 13 can he get his team off the beach and firing again?

III. Bad Mother Tucker (Dave) – Pick #2 – Seed #7

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |             |           |              |            |          | High   | Low  |
|---|---|--------------|-------------|-----------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|------|
|   |   | For          | Against     | Diff      | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |      |
| 5 | 8 | 1,662.02 (4) | 1607.98 (4) | 54.04 (4) | 1,976.82 (6) | 314.80 (2) | 84.1 (2) | 176.06 | 55.7 |

Picking from the #2 spot allowed Dave to pick from 'the best of the rest', picking up Saquon Barkley with his first pick. That was an unfortunate pick as he only survived two weeks before his season was abruptly brought to a halt with a season ending knee injury.

Dave had a league power ranking of 97 which put him third in the league for this season. He fell sharply below that expectation coming seventh. Dave's team was plagued by injuries which may be why he made several changes to his team through trades, making the joint most of 5. The most notable of these being a quick move on from the Saquon injury, trading him away for a healthy RB and a second round pick.

Dave could well feel hard done by this season. He stats and ranking suggest he should've finished fourth this year but unfortunately he was the most frequent player in the 'narrow loss' award category. He featured in this category 5 times, losing four of them. Had just one of these been a victory he'd be in the playoffs. What might have been, eh?

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – Regular Season Review

Dave's lack of getting his team across the line may come from his players rarely featuring in the top scoring position only picking up 7 of these weekly awards, predominantly at WR (4). Conversely, he didn't leave that many points on his bench only taking the weekly 'awards' 5 times, twice at D/ST. Unsurprisingly, he never won best manager once but was worst manager only once.

Going into the Trevor Trophy, Dave is in a strong position to pick up yet another QB (he has 6 on his roster now!) if he can avoid another narrow loss.

IV. Tompa Bay Bucs (Mike) – Pick #3 – Seed #8

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |              |            |              |            |          | High   | Low   |
|---|---|--------------|--------------|------------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|-------|
|   |   | For          | Against      | Diff       | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |       |
| 5 | 8 | 1,607.82 (7) | 1,668.62 (8) | -60.80 (6) | 1,925.74 (7) | 317.92 (3) | 83.5 (3) | 148.92 | 94.04 |

The top two RBs gone Mike went for Patrick Mahomes as his first pick and his team has been as consistent as his QB1. Some moderate highs with a high floor.

Mike had a league power ranking of 80 which put him ninth in the league for this season, so he finished one place above expectations. Mike made a few changes to his team through trades, making 3.

Mike was very consistent but this consistency came at the expense of putting in the scores to take victories. He picked very well finishing third and collecting more of the max points available to him than most. It sadly wasn't enough to improve his prospects to get into the playoffs.

Mike's players featured consistently in the top scoring position only, picking up 11 of these weekly awards, predominantly at QB and D/ST (3). His bench did take the weekly 'awards' regularly too with his TE and D/ST picking up the award 4 times (9 total). His exceptional picking meant he won best manager three times and was worst manager only once.

Going into the Trevor Trophy, Mike needs to start picking up some big scores to add to future hall of famer Patrick Mahomes and leave his QB worries to one side for the next decade.

V. Jurassic Chark (Jebus) – Pick #4 – Seed #3

| W | L | Pts (rank)       |              |            |              |             |              | High   | Low   |
|---|---|------------------|--------------|------------|--------------|-------------|--------------|--------|-------|
|   |   | For              | Against      | Diff       | Max For      | Missed      | Pick %       |        |       |
| 8 | 3 | 1,469.10(10) | 1,545.58 (1) | -76.48 (7) | 1,885.18 (9) | 416.08 (10) | 77.9(10) | 151.86 | 74.56 |

The Commish picked last years' outstanding rushing QB as his first pick and we can all agree he has not lived up to those very high expectations.

Jebus had a league power ranking of 92 which put him in seventh in the league for this season. He has massively exceeded those expectations with his third place finish. Despite talk of trade activity he only made 3 trades.

Jebus may have finished third but, frankly, he doesn't deserve to be there. Statistically, he is rock bottom in points scored and missed and is ninth in potential points. He is also tenth by some distance in terms of picking an optimal lineup. Despite scoring so few points and picking players seemingly at random, somehow the jammy bar-steward has run into the fewest points against allowing him to pick up an unlikely 8 wins!

It is not a surprise that Jebus' players have rarely featured in the top scoring position weekly awards. He won 4 of these with Henry picking it up twice. His bench did take the weekly 'awards' regularly with 8, a QB, RB and TE picking up the award twice each. He somehow won best manager once and was only worst manager twice.

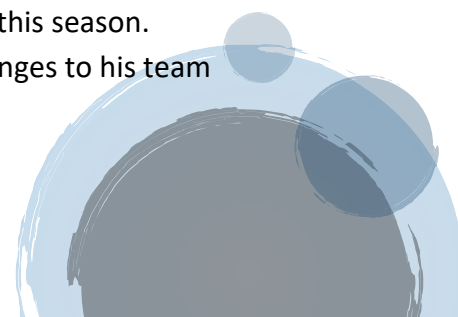

Going into the playoffs in fine form (4 wins), Jebus is relying on the luck which took him to the playoffs to help him take the belt.

VI. Canton Giants (Neil) – Pick #5 – Seed #10

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |              |                 |                  |            |          | High   | Low  |
|---|---|--------------|--------------|-----------------|------------------|------------|----------|--------|------|
|   |   | For          | Against      | Diff            | Max For          | Missed     | Pick %   |        |      |
| 5 | 8 | 1,482.32 (9) | 1,644.74 (7) | -162.42(10) | 1,839.86(10) | 357.54 (6) | 80.6 (9) | 177.62 | 57.4 |

With the consensus top four picks gone, Neil was left with a decision on how to approach the draft and went for Kamara. What a godsend he has been for his team....until Drew Brees got injured.

Neil had a league power ranking of 88 which put him eighth in the league for this season. Unfortunately, he has fallen below those expectations. Neil made several changes to his team through trades, making the joint most of 5.

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – Regular Season Review

Neil had a real boom and bust season either excelling or picking up below 100 points. He has won best manager and worst manager a record 3 times. He will probably feel hard done by given that, statistically, he performed similarly (but better than) Jebus but did not get the same luck.

Neil's players have rarely featured in the top scoring position weekly awards. He won 5 of these with Kamara and a D/ST picking it up twice. His bench did take the weekly 'awards' regularly with 8, his RBs and kickers picking up the award thrice each.

Neil's season could still end with a massive positive. If he can manage two more boom games he'll bag himself his pick of the 2021 draft (or a big trade!).

VII. Team Dudders79 (Rich) – Pick #6 – Seed #9

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |              |             |              |            |          | High   | Low   |
|---|---|--------------|--------------|-------------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|-------|
|   |   | For          | Against      | Diff        | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |       |
| 5 | 8 | 1,591.00 (8) | 1,728.32 (9) | -137.32 (9) | 1,912.16 (8) | 321.16 (4) | 83.2 (4) | 179.28 | 68.12 |

Rich's first pick was Ezekiel Elliot but like with so many first round picks, it hasn't formed a solid base for his team to progress.

Rich had a league power ranking of 93 which put him sixth in the league for this season.

Unfortunately, he too has fallen below those expectations. Rich didn't panic about his roster until trade deadline day when he made his only trade.

Rich's team scored quite consistently, with a couple of very high scores. He may well be scratching his head as to how his team ended up in ninth.

Rich's players have rarely featured in the top scoring position weekly awards. He won 5 of these with Adams and a D/ST picking it up twice. His bench did take the weekly 'awards' regularly with 7 and Justin Jefferson appearing 4 times! He won best manager once and was worst manager twice.

With the talent in Rich's team he has every chance of picking up a much needed partner for Aaron Rodgers.

VIII. Buffalo Bill Oddie (Lee) – Pick #7 – Seed #6

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |              |          |              |            |          | High   | Low   |
|---|---|--------------|--------------|----------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|-------|
|   |   | For          | Against      | Diff     | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |       |
| 6 | 7 | 1,651.52 (5) | 1,643.32 (6) | 8.20 (5) | 2,043.98 (4) | 392.46 (9) | 80.8 (8) | 160.70 | 90.74 |

Lee's first pick was Michael Thomas – a WR in a league of his own – but no longer on his team after some dramatic deadline day deals.

Lee had a league power ranking of 95 which put him fifth in the league for this season. He slipped by one spot but still made it into the playoffs. Lee made 4 trades including the two on deadline day.

Someone had to make the playoffs with a negative record and it was Lee's pretty consistent team which did it. He had a few highs but very few sub-100 weeks. Like Dave, he was on the receiving end of three narrow losses which impacted his overall record. His players were the most often top scoring in weekly awards with 14, predominantly Kelce (5) and Watson (4). He also topped the bench 'awards' with 11, 4 at WR. If he knew which players to pick his season could've ended very comfortably. He only won best manager and worst manager once.

Going into the playoffs if he can finally pick his best team consistently, there's no reason why he can't go all the way.

IX. Run Cam Run (Ross) – Pick #8 – Seed #2

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |              |            |              |            |          | High   | Low    |
|---|---|--------------|--------------|------------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|--------|
|   |   | For          | Against      | Diff       | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |        |
| 8 | 5 | 1,812.82 (1) | 1,596.82 (3) | 216.00 (1) | 2,113.28 (1) | 300.46 (1) | 85.8 (1) | 165.42 | 105.78 |

Ross' first pick was Tyreek Hill and what a season he is having....Ross that is.

Ross had a league power ranking of 62 which put him bottom of the league for this season but what does statisticians know, eh? He's no. 2 only because he was waiting for Tyrod Taylor's lung to be punctured. Ross has made 3 trades so far as he still doesn't believe his side is good enough.

Ross basically tops everyone statistically and has not yet recorded a sub 100 performance. If he was a footballer, he'd be a first round pick. His team's performance and his ability to pick an optimal lineup is almost the polar opposite of Jebus but somehow they share the same record – that there is the NFL in 2020.

Similarly to Alex, his players were rarely the top scoring in any one position only picking up 8 of these weekly awards, predominantly at RB (3). His power to pick (or weak bench?) meant he didn't leave that many points on his bench only taking the weekly ‘awards’ 5 times, twice at RB and D/ST. Despite taking the league by storm he only won best and worst manager once.

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – Regular Season Review

Going into the playoffs with a bye he may be the favourite for the championship belt. His end of season form was spotless (5 wins) but has Herbert, like Samson, lost his power now he’s had his haircut?

X. Team ChrisNewbrook (Chris) – Pick #9 – Seed #5

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |               |            |              |            |          | High   | Low   |
|---|---|--------------|---------------|------------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|-------|
|   |   | For          | Against       | Diff       | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |       |
| 7 | 6 | 1,638.48 (6) | 1,733.72 (10) | -95.24 (8) | 2,004.16 (5) | 365.68 (8) | 81.8 (7) | 163.16 | 77.66 |

Chris opened his old man draft with the sprightly Dalvin Cook. What a great pick. It’s a shame the old men very nearly let their boss down at the end.

Chris had a league power ranking of 95 which put him fourth in the league for this season. His aging team only dropped one place from that prediction. Chris was keen on a trade offer but only got one over the line.

Chris’ team of intrepid veterans and Joe Burrow started slowly, like an old man getting from his chair, but soon rallied picking up five wins in six. Perhaps inevitably they ran out of steam not keeping up with the younger teams (or ironically his one young player getting crocked). But they kept their wise old heads and their experience shone through when they secured a playoff spot with a last minute victory.

Chris’ players featured fairly consistently in the top scoring position, picking up 9 of these weekly awards, predominantly Cook (4). His bench did take the weekly ‘awards’ regularly too with his D/ST picking up the award 4 times (10 total). He picked up best manager an impressive two times and was worst manager only once.

Going into the playoffs, Chris needs his aging QBs back (and in form) to be in with a shout of the belt.

XI. Radyr Raiders (Gareth) – Pick #10 – Seed #4

| W | L | Pts (rank)   |              |            |              |            |          | High   | Low   |
|---|---|--------------|--------------|------------|--------------|------------|----------|--------|-------|
|   |   | For          | Against      | Diff       | Max For      | Missed     | Pick %   |        |       |
| 7 | 6 | 1,743.86 (2) | 1,621.80 (5) | 122.06 (3) | 2,107.80 (2) | 363.94 (7) | 82.7 (6) | 181.08 | 80.94 |

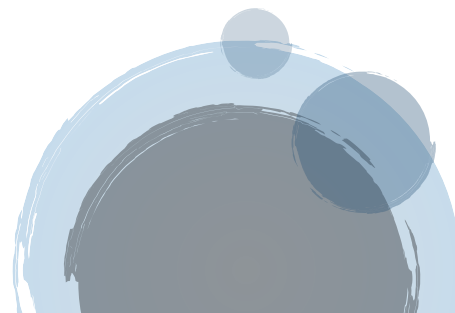

Our resident elder statesman picked young Miles Sanders as his first pick and if it had not been for injury and playing with Carson Wentz may have had a stronger end to the season.

Gareth had a league power ranking of 100 which put him top of the league for this season. His side has underperformed according to the league table finishing in fourth. Gareth felt no need to make any trades this season.

Despite repeatedly and stubbornly playing a man who's head has clearly gone, Gareth secured 5 wins out of six in the mid-season to secure his place in the playoffs nice and early. Indeed Mr Haven put up some very impressive scores and had it been for better optimisation, could easily have won the league.

Gareth's players were rarely the top scoring in any one position only picking up 7 of these weekly awards, predominantly at TE and D/ST (2). He didn't leave that many points on his bench taking a league low of 4 weekly 'awards'. Despite his mostly strong performance he has never won best manager but has been worst manager once.

Going into the playoffs against an equally aging team from Mr Newbrook, we are guaranteed a team of veterans in the semi-finals. Can Gareth regain his mid-season form and show that age can outperform beauty?

XII. Awards

So to our end of regular season awards. I've given you a few updates of progress along the way but who are the managers who went the extra mile to pick up the awards?

League Winner

Self-explanatory and decided after only four games:

Alex

Top Scorer

Again self-explanatory:

Ross – 1,812.82

Followed by Gareth (1,743.86) and Alex (1,713.34).

Best Defence

Jebus – 1,545.58

Followed by Alex (1,581.38) and Ross (1,596.82)

Bestballer

If we had been playing Bestball and your best lineup had played every week the league winner would have been:

Ross – 2,113.28

Followed by Gareth (2,107.80) and Alex (2,064.58)

Worstballer

Bottom of the bestball pile (and would be Trevor winner)?

Neil

Followed by Jebus and Rich

Overachiever

Who picked up the most number of overachiever awards? You always under-estimate the veterans in fantasy football:

Chris

Wisest Manager

Who picked their closest to optimal team?

Ross – 85.8%

Followed by Dave (84.1%) and Mike (83.5%)

Clueless Manager

Who basically picked their team at random?

Jebus

Followed by Neil and Lee

All or Nothing

When he wasn't the best manager he somehow managed to fall 'win' the below expectations award:

Neil

Biggest Loser

This award goes to a manager on two accounts. Firstly, he lost the most games by the finest of margins. He was also the top points scorer who didn't make the playoffs:

Dave

MVP Picker

They drafted studs who outperformed all their positional counterparts the most:

~~Travis Kelce~~ Lee – 14

Followed by Mike (11) and Chris (9)

~~Best Bench~~ Poorest Picker

They drafted studs but just couldn't fit them into their table topping teams:

Lee - 11

Followed by Chris (10) and, Alex (9) and Mike (9)
