

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2020 Season Review

I. Introduction

Well can you believe it. We made it all the way to week 16! There was a lot of speculation pre-season and there were points during the season that it didn't look likely. Hopefully, the NFL will be able to complete the season, playoffs and a well-deserved Superbowl win for the Chiefs.

Thank you all for your cooperation and commitment throughout the season. I know we've needed to make a couple of changes and create protocols in-season but thankfully never needed to fully use them.

I think we judged the number of participants in the league really well. We all seem pretty balanced too with everyone drafting, trading or picking a competitive team. Everyone was in with a shout of the playoffs with three NFL games remaining and only one out of it with one crucial NFL match to play. The playoffs kept the theme with the eventual winner relying on players in the very last game of Week 16.

II. Results

So, the final table looks like this:

1. Ross – Run Cam Run (8-5)
2. Gareth – Radyr Raiders (7-6)
3. Jebus – Jurassic Chark (8-5)
4. Alex – Hot Chubb Time Machine (9-4)
5. Lee – Buffalo Bill Oddie (6-7)
6. Chris – Team ChrisNewbrook (7-6)
7. Dave – Bad Mother Tucker (5-8)
8. Rich – Team Dudders79 (5-8)
9. Mike – Tompa Bay Bucs (5-8)
10. Neil – Canton Giants (5-8)

Many congratulations must go to Ross. It took a bit of time (and injuries to players) to get his team going but when it did in Week 9 there was no looking back winning seven games on the bounce to take the Championship. He was severely tested by Gareth in the last game but pushed through with an outstanding performance from MVP hopeful Josh Allen. It wasn't just those last weeks that pushed Ross over the line, he did it at the draft. The whole of his championship winning 10 was picked up in the draft.

Whilst most of the plaudits will rightly go to top scoring and championship winning team, the early running and regular season was won by Alex. His team may have stumbled at the end and finished fourth but I'm sure we all remember the six game winning streak that helped him take the regular season.

The results aren't confined to the final table and people who actually won things but also the affect the playoffs and Consolation Bowl has on the draft (as things stand):

Round 1	Round 2	Round 3	Round 4	Round 5
1. Dave	1. Dave	1. Dave	1. Dave	1. Dave
2. Rich	2. Rich	2. Rich	2. Rich	2. Rich
3. Mike	3. Mike	3. Mike	3. Mike	3. Mike
4. Neil	4. Neil	4. Neil	4. Neil	4. Neil
5. Lee	5. Alex (from Lee)	5. Lee	5. Lee	5. Lee
6. Chris	6. Chris	6. Chris	6. Chris	6. Chris
7. Lee (from Jibus)	7. Dave (from Jibus)	7. Lee (from Jibus)	7. Jibus	7. Jibus
8. Alex	8. Lee (from Alex)	8. Alex	8. Alex	8. Alex
9. Gareth	9. Gareth	9. Gareth	9. Gareth	9. Gareth
10. Ross	10. Ross	10. Ross	10. Ross	10. Ross

Congratulations clearly need to go to Dave as he won the Consolation Bowl (Trevor Trophy). His consistent but unremarkable scoring took the 'trophy' and the opportunity to pick any rookie (or free agent) at the draft. We can all now wonder who he will pick. Alternatively, we can all bombard him with trade offers to get the same opportunity. What will it take for the hoarder of QBs to relieve him of the opportunity to draft yet another one? It'll be like watching Draft Day all over again.

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – Season Review

Before I analyse each team I thought I'd share a couple of interesting tables from the season (which can be found in the league history on the app).

Weekly High Scores

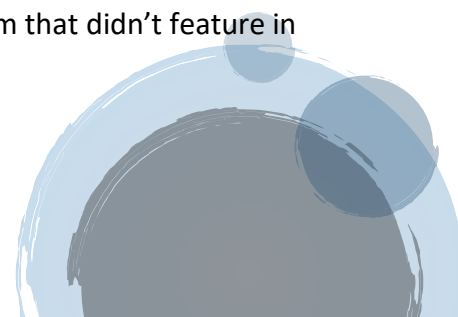

Place	Team	Week	Score
1	Gareth	2	181.08
2	Rich	7	179.28
3	Neil	3	177.62
4	Dave	7	176.06
5	Gareth	5	173.10
6	Ross	12	165.42
7	Chris	8	163.16
8	Ross	15	162.82
9	Lee	5	160.70
10	Gareth	11	159.78

Gareth not only tops the charts but has three entries in the top 10! Mike and league leader Alex are both conspicuous by their absence. It is of no surprise that Jebus didn't make the list.

Player High Scores

Place	Team	Week	Score
1	T. Hill	12	51.40
2	D. Cook	8	47.60
3	T. Lockett	7	45.50
4	A. Jones	2	43.60
5	P. Mahomes	3	40.00
6	D. Henry	6	39.40
7	D. Prescott	2	38.80
8	D. Waller	13	38.50
9	J. Herbert	7	38.48
10	D. Cook	9	38.20

Although he had 3 top scoring entries overall, Gareth only had one player in the top ten and not in a week he achieved a top score! Ross' players have 3 entries, Chris and Dave 2 and Gareth, Mike and Jebus 1 each. Our league leader Alex again conspicuous by his absence. It's a real shame Alvin Kamara's 54.7 point 6 TD week doesn't appear on the list but he was on a team that didn't feature in week 16.

III. Hot Chubb Time Machine – Alex

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
9	4	1	1	0	2	4	8	1

Picking from the #1 spot, it is unsurprising that the 2019 stud RB, Christian McCaffrey, ended up on Alex's team. What was surprising is how little Alex's got to use him.

Alex had a league power ranking of 98 (of 100) which put him second in the league for the season. He eventually fell below these expectations finishing fourth. Alex made very few changes to his team. He still has 20 of his original drafted team, traded one (for one) and replaced four through waivers.

It was highlighted after the draft that Alex may have appeared to be weaker on the WR front. He has partially addressed this through his sole trade with Lee bringing in Devante Parker (Pick 9.7) for James Connor (Pick 7.1) and swapping second round picks. According to KeepTradeCut, he won this trade at season end by over 3,000 points. With Connor's future looking uncertain that looks about right.

Alex had a very strong start to the season but the pressure and injuries really hurt his team in the end.

The question now is what can he do to address his end of season form? Is the return of CMC the catalyst to get his team firing again in 2021 or will some new blood or further smart trading push a team he is clearly happy with to new heights?

V. Bad Mother Tucker – Dave

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
5	8	2	7	2	0	7	1	5

Picking from the #2 spot allowed Dave to pick from ‘the best of the rest’, picking up Saquon Barkley with his first pick. That was an unfortunate pick as he only survived two weeks before his season was abruptly brought to a halt with a season ending knee injury.

Dave had a league power ranking of 97 which put him third in the league for this season. He fell sharply below that expectation coming seventh. Dave’s team was plagued by injuries which may be why he made several changes to his team. He has 13 of his original drafted team, traded six (for six and a second round pick) and replaced eleven through waivers.

It was highlighted post draft that Dave was short in WR and TE and that he needed to resolve this through trades. He certainly improved his TE core, initially by trading Big Ben (14.9) and Mike Williams (16.9) to Neil for Gesicki (11.5) and DJ Moore (3.5) and then Engram (7.3) for Lindsay (13.2) with Mike. His other trades were David Johnson (8.8) for Devonta Freeman (Free Agent) with Mike, Nick Chubb (2.6) for Marvin Jones (10.9), David Johnson (Trade) and Hayden Hurst (9.2) and Montgomery (6.7) for Saquon (1.2) and a 2021 second round pick with Jebus! Despite the devastating loss of Saquon, according to KeepTradeCut, Dave made an overall positive trade position by over 10,000 points.

Dave could well feel hard done by this season. He stats and ranking suggest he should’ve finished fourth this year but unfortunately he was frequently on the end of very tight losses and he lost several players to injury.

He can’t feel that hard done by though as he did win the Consolation Bowl and the Trevor Trophy. Dave is in a strong position to pick up yet another QB (he has 6 on his roster now!) but would he be better served trading for an elite WR or RB?

VII. Tompa Bay Bucs – Mike

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
5	8	3	8	1	1	9	3	3

The top two RBs gone Mike went for Patrick Mahomes as his first pick and his team has been as consistent as his QB1. Some moderate highs with a high floor but a bad dose of misfortune.

Mike had a league power ranking of 80 which put him ninth in the league for this season, so he finished where he was expected to. Despite his low finish Mike seems moderately happy with his team, retaining 16 of the players he drafted, trading three (for three) and replacing six through waivers.

It was highlighted post draft that Mike had picked up several younger players and if he wanted to win now he would need to trade in every position. He did 'strengthen' his RB position by trading Lindsay (13.2) and Devonta Freeman (Free Agent) for Engram (7.3) and David Johnson (8.8), respectively, with Dave. He also picked up Higbee (16.7) for McLaurin (6.8) with Jebus. Where there are winners there are also trade losers. According to KeepTradeCut, Mike is at a negative 8,000 position in trades this season.

Mike was very consistent but this consistency came at the expense of putting in the scores to take victories. He picked his teams very well finishing third and collecting more of the max points available to him than most. It sadly wasn't enough to improve his prospects to get into the playoffs but he did avoid the 'Loser of all Losers' tag.

What next for Mike? His team has some late breakout players for the 2021 season and if keeps them and picks well with his high Rookie draft capital could he make 2021 his year?

IX. Jurassic Chark – Jebus

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
8	5	4	3	2	1	3	7 (37)	3

The Commish picked last years' outstanding rushing QB as his first pick and who slowly improved as the season went on.

Jebus had a league power ranking of 92 which put him in seventh in the league for this season. He has massively exceeded those expectations with his third place finish. He obviously wasn't massively impressed with his drafting skills, retaining only 14 of those he drafted, shipping 4 out in trades and selling his future in trading.

It was highlighted post draft that Jebus needed to improve his WRs to compete. He certainly took that to heart adding McLaurin (6.8) and Michael Thomas (1.7) for Higbee (16.7) (with Mike) and Derek Carr (20.7), Mattison (14.7) and first and third round picks in 2021 (with Lee – also receiving Minshew (13.7)). He also strengthened his RB position for 2021 by trading Montgomery (6.7) and his second round 2021 pick for a badly injured Saquon Barkley (1.2) with Dave. According to KeepTradeCut, Jebus is at a positive 7,000 position in trades this season.

Jebus may have finished third but, frankly, he didn't deserve to be there statistically speaking. He probably doesn't care either.

Has Jebus put all his eggs in the 2021 basket and are the eggs enough to take on the challenge of his league mates? Will he trade his future again to pick up even more injured studs or will he come to his senses and realise that Dynasty lasts more than two seasons? Only Jebus can answer that.

XI. Canton Giants – Neil

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
5	8	5	10	0	2	10	4	5

With the consensus top four picks gone, Neil was left with a decision on how to approach the draft and went for 6 TD Kamara.

Neil had a league power ranking of 88 which put him eighth in the league for this season. Unfortunately, he has fallen below those expectations. Neil was the most unhappy with his draft keeping just 11 of his original 25. He has traded 6 (in return for 9) cutting 8 free.

It was highlighted post draft that Neil was short at QB and that he needed to resolve this through trades. He did this early, initially by trading Gesicki (11.5) and DJ Moore (3.5) for Big Ben (14.9) and Mike Williams (16.9) to Dave. He then traded one half of the Browns RB duo, Kareem Hunt (8.6), with Lee for Slayton (15.7) and Ingram (11.7). He also traded the better half of the Browns RB duo, Nick Chubb (2.6), with Dave for Marvin Jones (10.9), David Johnson (Trade) and Hayden Hurst (9.2). Neil also made 2 trades with Ross, picking up Mullens (FA) and McKinnon (24.3) for Darnold (13.5) and Ebron (20.6), respectively. Despite the number of acquisitions, according to KeepTradeCut, Neil finished with an overall negative trade position by over 20,000 points.

Neil had a real boom and bust season either excelling or picking up below 100 points. Unfortunately, there were more busts than booms resulting in him taking home the ‘Loser of all Losers’ golden turd.

With a few changes, some high-end Rookies and a bit of much needed luck there’s no reason why Neil can’t be competitive in the 2021 season.

XIII. Team Dudders79 – Rich

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
5	8	6	9	1	1	8	2	1

Rich's first pick was Ezekiel Elliot but like with so many first round picks, it hasn't formed a solid base for his team to progress.

Rich had a league power ranking of 93 which put him sixth in the league for this season. Unfortunately, he too has fallen below those expectations finishing eighth. Like Alex, Rich made very few changes to his team. He still has 20 of his original drafted team, traded one (for one) and replaced four through waivers.

It was highlighted after the draft that Rich may have appeared to be weaker on the QB front with an abundance of talented WRs to trade for one. The season didn't quite work out that way with more deficiency at RB. He has addressed this through his sole trade with Lee bringing in Kareem Hunt (trade) for rookie stud Jefferson (9.6). According to KeepTradeCut, he lost this trade at season end by over 3,000 points. More on this trade later.

Rich's team scored quite consistently, with a couple of very high scores. He may well be scratching his head as to how his team ended up in ninth.

With some better trading and taking advantage of his No. 2 pick position, Rich could well be a dark horse for the 2021 championship.

XV. Buffalo Bill Oddie – Lee

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
6	7	7	6	1	1	5	5	4

Lee's first pick was Michael Thomas – a WR in a league of his own – but no longer on his team after some dramatic deadline day deals.

Lee had a league power ranking of 95 which put him fifth in the league for this season. He met his rankings. Lee only half liked his drafted team. He has 13 of his original drafted team, traded five and ruthlessly cut seven.

It was highlighted post draft that Lee was short in RB and that unless Jacobs improved or Fournette actually started scoring touchdowns he needed to resolve this through trades. He did this fairly early on in the season trading Slayton (15.7) and Ingram (11.7) with Mike for Kareem Hunt (8.6). However, as the trade deadline drew close and his team on a four game losing streak panic set in and he made 3 trades in the last 24 hours of the deadline. The night before the deadline he added James Connor (Pick 7.1) for Devante Parker (Pick 9.7) and swapping second round picks with Alex. Then the drama.

Firstly, he somehow managed to convince Rich into letting him have rookie breakout stud Justin Jefferson (9.6) for the aforementioned Kareem Hunt. Now having an abundance of WRs he needed shot of one to improve his overall team balance and future prospects so he managed to wangle first and third round 2021 picks (and Derek Carr (20.7) and Mattison (14.7)) for soon to be second fiddle Gardner Minshew (13.7) and Michael Thomas (1.7). According to KeepTradeCut, all this last-minute wheeling and dealing provided an overall positive trade position by over 7,600 points.

Despite the negative record Lee reached the playoffs and finished a respectable mid-table. Can he now capitalise on his extra picks and form a team ready to challenge in 2021 or is he still looking for that elusive stud RB to get him over the line when it matters?

XVII. Run Cam Run – Ross

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
8	5	8	2	2	0	1	10	3

Ross' first pick was Tyreek Hill and what a season he has had....Ross that is.

Ross had a league power ranking of 62 which put him bottom of the league for this season but what does statisticians know, eh? He went and won the belt he fell in love with at first sight. Ross drafted young and well and retained 15 of those picks. He traded 2 and cut the remaining 8.

Ross made 3 trades but were a bit hit and miss. He traded Jerry Jeudy (7.8) to Chris early for Emmanuel Sanders (16.2), then made two trades with Neil for Dalton (13.5) and Ebron (20.6), giving Neil Mullens (FA) and McKinnon (24.3), respectively. Ross has recorded a loss in his trading, according to KeepTradeCut, of around 1,200 points.

Ross' team scored consistently above and beyond 100 points but he did get a good dose of good fortune in a punctured lung to Tyrod and picking up undrafted free agent Robinson in the waivers. That latter 'win' was a masterstroke (Robinson is the RB4 for the season) which arguably won him the league. He basically had an extra first round pick.

So, has Ross created a young team which is set to dominate for years to come or will some of his team regress to the mean? One thing is for certain – we'd all like to wipe that smug smile from his face.

XIX. Team ChrisNewbrook – Chris

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
7	6	9	5	0	2	6	6	1

Chris opened his old man draft with the sprightly Dalvin Cook. What a great pick. It's a shame the old men let the boss of the most imaginatively named team down in the end.

Chris had a league power ranking of 95 which put him fourth in the league for this season. His aging team dropped two places from that prediction. Chris retained a large number of his drafted players, 19, trading one and cutting the remaining five.

Chris was keen on a trade offer but only got one over the line, picking up rookie Jerry Jeudy (7.8) from Ross for the aging (what a surprise) Emmanuel Sanders (16.2). This was a shrewd move from Chris not only bringing down the average age of his team but amassing a profit of 4,500 points.

Chris' team of intrepid veterans and Joe Burrow had a real purple patch in the middle of the season which secured his playoff berth. It was somewhat brought to and standstill by the injuries to his two main QBs.

Chris will be hoping for a return to fitness of his QBs and a refresh to some players who may have seen their last fantasy productive season in the NFL. It may need to be an early rebuild but if he gets it right he'll be a contender in 2022 and beyond. Is he set for a season in the wilderness or can he spring some more trade magic?

XXI. Radyr Raiders – Gareth

Regular Season W	Regular Season L	2020 Draft Pick	Regular Season Finish	Post Season W	Post Season L	Final Season Finish	2021 Draft Pick	Trades
7	6	10	4	2	1	2	9	0

Our resident elder statesman picked young Miles Sanders as his first pick and if it had not been for injury and playing with Carson Wentz may have gone and won it.

Gareth had a league power ranking of 100 which put him top of the league for this season. His side was pipped at the post by Ross' young guns but he made a real game of it. Gareth was rightly happy with his draft keeping 17 and cutting 8. Very much like Chris, he picked a team predominantly of veterans designed to win now. And, unlike Chris, he very nearly did.

But why didn't he trade up to push his team over the line? If the aim was to win now then why not make the deals (I am absolutely certain that he received offers) that would have scored him the points to take him over the line?

Is he suffering from senility or 'take lock'. It could be either. We'll know by what he does with his continuing faith in retaining the services of a man who is clearly mentally ill when behind his O-line.

With this season now over, a failure and no added benefit of high draft capital in for the latest influx of rookies, do his aging stars have enough gas in the tank to have one more shot at glory or is Gareth finally going to relent to trade with his league mates?

XXII. Conclusion

Congratulations once more to our worthy winner, Ross. Plaudits also go to Dave for successfully navigating the league to take the first round draft pick and the 'once in a generation' QB, or whoever he may pick.

Mostly, thanks to all of you for committing to the league and keeping it entertaining and competitive for the whole season. We now have 9 months to inseminate our squads with new blood; carefully hone and develop them and give birth to 10 competitive teams in a new league season.

I hope you've all enjoyed the season and league as much as I have. I look forward to meeting with you all (probably virtually) on Super Bowl Sunday and then maybe in person for our first rookie draft!
