

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2023 Season Preview

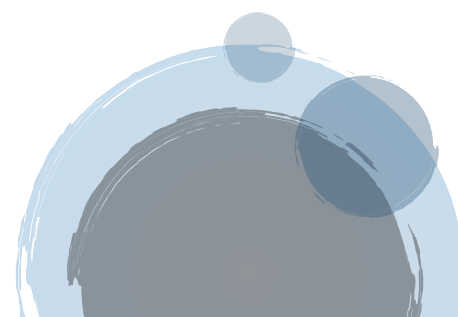

1. Introduction

Welcome to the fourth year of our dynasty league! After another eventful season I know that we're all eager for the kick-off of the NFL season and the fantasy adventure that accompanies it.

I'd like to start by congratulating myself on my magnificent victory last year and wish you all almost the best of luck for the season ahead. At least we don't have to worry me gloating for at least another 5 months in every update, eh?

It's the second season with our Lombardi and Madden Conferences vying for dominance over the JADL. From a factual and academic perspective, it is evident that the MFC is the dominant conference at present but I'm sure in a few years of good drafts and maybe a bit of trading the LFC will start to become more competitive in the right direction.

There are ample stats on our website and on Sleeper so I won't go as heavily into these as before but I have included a couple of metrics about what the often-maligned experts think now and did they get it right on the whole last season.

2. Mandos (Gareth - LFC) – 10th Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
71	9 th (9 th)	9 th (-)	10 th (-1)	56 (-15)	9 th	10 th

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
10 th	=7 th	10 th	10 th	9 th	9 th	9 th	10 th

The last two seasons' Loser of All Losers finds himself very much in a similar place in terms of projections this year. Could we have the first 'trophy' winner to get to keep his trophy after three magnificent victories? With a further rebranded team comes a rebranded GM making trades willy-nilly. Gone are the days of the 'No Trade' policy and with what looks like firm sights set on 2024 and beyond he's set up nicely with those two new and exciting QBs and a few additional draft picks. So let's take a look at G's refreshed team.

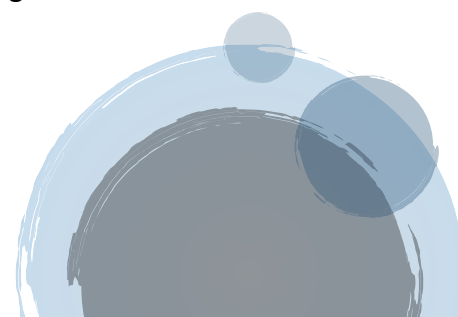

Four starting QBs is a great start. It's the old and the new: Mr Unlimited and Tannehill providing that veteran presence (as QB2s and QB3s) to support the appropriately named Bryce Young and AR15 (both QB2s). Will this be a season of transition from a team of old men to (not so) little kids? Is there a possible trade target here for a team short of a QB so G can bring that average age down again?

Gareth's RB core is getting younger too but sadly not improving. He has Javonte Williams an RB3, then an RB4 in Tank Bigsby, with four RB5s in Singletary, Miller, Edwards and CEH (remember him?) picking up the rest of his viable options. A lot of hope and dreams. It's not a championship winning lineup – unless your championship is turd shaped.

Gareth's WR core again looks young and filled with hope. Led by a WR2 in Christian Watson and WR3 in Diontae Johnson and backed up by a WR4 and three WR5s with a strong veteran presence in Lazard and OBJ. Youth and hope abounds but perhaps not yet championship winning difference makers.

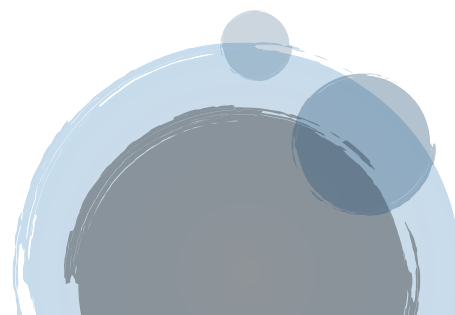

Another position and the same old story. Youth in abundance but not too much in terms of proven production just yet. A TE2 Juwan Johnson in a TE platoon in New Orleans then a lot of TE3 hope. Not too dissimilar to other teams but not looking great without a massive breakout.

Weeks 6 (against Jebus) and 7 ('The Clash of the Gash') maybe particularly tough with some significant bye week clashes.

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2023 Season Preview

It looks like another tough year for Gareth and his Mandos but there's some youth and hope for the future which won't be hurt by another high draft pick.

3. Canton Giants (Neil - MFC) – 9th Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
71	8 th (8 th)	8 th (-)	9 th (-1)	63 (-8)	8 th	8 th

QB		RB		WR		TE
ECR	JR™	ECR	JR™	ECR	JR™	ECR	JR™
7 th	=7 th	8 th	=8 th	6 th	=7 th	10 th	9 th

It was a tough 2022 for Neil and his Giants and if the predictions are anything to go by it'll be another tough one as he seemingly ends up back in the race for the 1.01. He's bucked those predications before but selling those veteran assets this summer makes it unlikely that he'll do it again.

Neil's strengthened his QB room over the summer adding the NFL's second overall pick and a veteran in Stafford to his room which also gives him four viable starters. He has one QB1 in Daniel Jones and two further QBs in the top 24 so he's doing better than our leagues consensus number 1 team. One thing is for sure, he won't be rueing passing up on Trey Lance, Mac Jones and Zach Wilson at the 2021 rookie draft.

Neil's RB core isn't looking great. Neil has an RB1 in Najee Harris but after that it's three RB4s in Jamal Williams, Penny and Achane. It doesn't get much better from there. At least in Achane, Spears and Hull he has some youthful backs ready to step up if the vets ahead of them get injured (or traded).

It's looking a bit better at WR with Aaron Rodgers' WR1 Garrett Wilson, a WR2 and two WR3 making up his viable starters. It's a long drop off from there but his core isn't too dissimilar in strength to the other bottom dwelling MFC teams.

Neil's team, like so many, suffers from the dearth of quality at the TE position. Selling a potentially resurgent Waller has left him with two TE2s and a TE3. He'll be hoping that he picks the right one when streaming them.

He's done some excellent planning with no bye weeks significantly affected.

It looks likely to be another tough season for Neil. There's certainly some hope if his top tier players can stay fit and some of those rookies make their mark straight away but would his team be better served in the long-run with the choice of rookies at this year's rookie draft? Given the relative strength of the MFC, Neil has an outside chance of making the playoffs but could do his team more harm than good.

4. K.I.T.T.L.E (Alex - LFC) – 8th Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
40	10 th (10 th)	10 th (-)	8 th (+2)	51 (+11)	10 th	9 th

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
9 th	10 th	7 th	=6 th	10 th	10 th	7 th	=5 th

Last season's projected bottom team continues with his rebuild in 2023. He picked up all the top players at RB, WR and TE in the draft but he missed out on one of those QBs. Will he be in the Caleb sweepstakes again this year? He cut his team very deep with a power ranking drop of 60 points last year but is making progress and will be hoping that those skill players make a step forward this year.

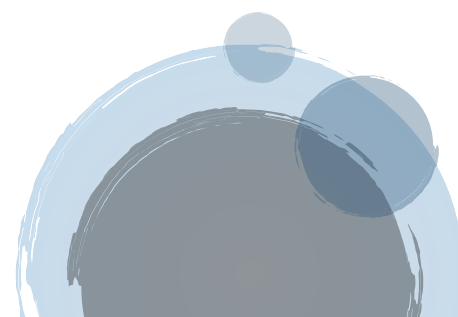

Technically, Alex has six QBs but in reality only one is starting. Since he didn't pick up one of the big 3 names at the draft, opting to take an RB instead, it will come as no surprise that he is ranked bottom of the pile here. One can only assume that plethora of 2024 firsts will be used to draft some QBs. He'll need to find another starter for this year though or maybe one of those first round picks will be removed as the punishment for not having a full line-up in week 5? I'm sure there are a couple of teams that could help him out though.

A similar story at RB with Alex's side ranking boosted by the generational talent with his own brand of mustard. Beyond that though is an RB3 and some dart-throws/backups. More of those firsts are going to be needed here to be able to compete again.

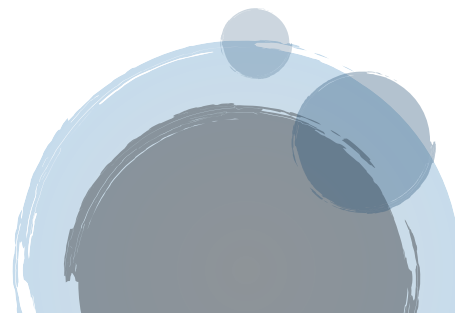

Unlike his QBs and RBs, Alex has a very poor WR core with no WR1 to make up for the dearth behind them. Godwin is his top ranked player who's a WR3 then JSN who may be good next year then a load of dross. Yet more demand on those firsts in the next drafts.

It's not quite as bad at the TE position. This is mainly because, outside of the top few TEs, it's all a gamble at TE. Evan Engram looked good when fit last year and Dalton Kincaid could be the next big thing. Let's see how this room progresses this year.

Every week looks like it's probably going to be tough. However, Week 5 (vs Mike) features no QBs which needs sorting otherwise a suitable punishment will be needed to make an example of such poor management and disruption to the integrity of the league. Otherwise, Bijan is out for week 11 (vs Dave) so will be a harder week than most.

Alex's team name certainly seems appropriate for this year. He kept it tight in the draft and will be hoping luck emerges, particularly a fall from grace from Chris or Lee to get that oh so valuable rookie QB.

5. Falcons (Chris - MFC) – 7th Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
88	4 th (5 th)	5 th (-1)	7 th (-3)	73 (-15)	6 th	6 th

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
4 th	=3 rd	4 th	4 th	8 th	6 th	5 th	=7 th

The last of the non-playoff teams and it's a case of what might've been for the next team - if he'd just scored 16 more points he would've come second to Mike in the final. According to the experts his team has taken a bit of a step back and while that's bad news for the ~~Warden~~ Chris it's good news for Alex.

At QB Chris would be looking really good if it wasn't for Kyler's poorly knee and the teeny-towelled twat looking pretty fucking rusty last year. The Cardinal's adding yet another QB in the last few days makes it look like Kyler isn't going to be playing too much this year so Chris will be relying on the alleged sexual predator to be good again to be competing this year.

While Chris did have one of the stronger starting RB cores, alas age and the move towards RBBC (running back by committee) has left him with just one RB1 remaining (and Henry will be 30 this year). After that he's got a Ken who's got to compete with a Charbonnet and a Cook who's competing with a Hall. Maybe Khalil Herbert will be able to compete with Fields for the Bear's RB1 role but that seems unlikely. It's going to be a year of hope for Chris here.

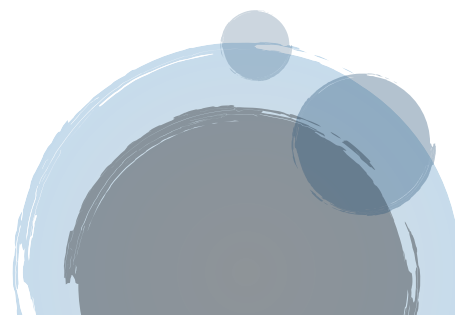

Chris has one of the weaker WR cores. It's not all bad though. Led out by two WR2s, three WR3s and a WR4. At least he's got some youth on his side but he's going to need some serious breakouts to see him through the season and to a championship.

Chris has a decent starting TE in Alex's team's namesake and he'll be hoping he can reproduce the form he showed at the end of the season with superstar QB Brock Purdy. His TEs after that are nothing to shout about so he has to hope that Kittle doesn't turn back into a blocking TE again.

Weeks 7 (vs Dave) and 9 (vs Lee) are looking to be hard bye weeks and week 5 (vs Jebus) it looks like he'll be down to one QB.

There is the potential for a run to the playoffs if he Henry and his QBs stay fit or trades to find some depth to be competitive over a long season. If he can buy a ticket, he can win it but he's partly sacrificed his team his team until 2026 does he need to trade in an asset to finally make a run at that championship?

6. One Flew of the Rookies Nest (Ross - MFC) – 6th Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
80	5 th (4 th)	4 th (+1)	6 th (-1)	75 (-5)	5 th	5 th

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
2 nd	2 nd	6 th	=6 th	5 th	=7 th	1 st	=2 nd

Now for the first of last years playoff teams and one of just two teams to make the playoffs every year since the league's inception. The man had a keen eye for rookies (was whole banana eating Will Levis really worth a first?) and is often assisted with an enormous dollop of luck. But has that luck run out after making the playoffs by just 16 points then coming 6th? So what to make of this team?

Two years ago I asked how you can win a superflex league with only two QBs and it looks like it's back to the future for Ross. My word two of those starters are good – both QB1s with years of production ahead of them. Beyond that – backups and a rookie who can't beat Malik Willis in a competition to be backup to a bang average QB. Lee's had a good stroke of luck that his matchups with Ross perfectly align with Ross' QB bye weeks.

Ross' RB core is looking decidedly ropery. One RB1 - who's just had Zeke added to the backfield (Stevenson) - one RB2, - who had surgery mid-season and isn't even their teams rushing leader (Dobbins) - and one RB3 - who isn't even the teams RB1 (Perine) - will be the core he is relying on. That's it. A load of committee and backups after that. In the most injury prone position in football. Good luck with this approach Ross – like with your QBs, it's a bold strategy.

I was tempted to copy and paste the assessment of Ross' RB room and just replace RB with WR. Once again Ross' core is one WR1, one WR2 and one WR3. After that is a rookie, some sophomores and a whole load of hope.

Same old story at TE but at least the TE1 here is THE TE1, Travis Kelce. Barring injury, he'll have a difference maker here all season long.

Surely he's planned well for bye week clashes? Alas, with a famine of depth he's going to be looking at lower tier replacements against MFC opponents in weeks 5 (vs Lee), 7 (vs Neil), 10 (vs Jebus), 11 (vs Neil) and 13 (vs Lee).

Ross will of course believe he's competing this year. With QBs like that, why wouldn't you be. But will the rest of his team hold up with injuries against some very good teams in the MFC?

7. Mac to the Future (Dave - LFC) – 5th Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
77	6 th (7 th)	7 th (-1)	6 th (-)	85 (+8)	3 rd	4 th

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
6 th	=5 th	3 rd	=2 nd	7 th	=3 rd	4 th	=2 nd

Next up is the man who only made the playoffs due to our new conferences. It gives the LFC hope, I suppose. He was ranked as a top 3 team when he won the whole thing and he'll be hoping that's a good omen. Does his team have what it takes to be the first team to regain the belt? Let's see.

At QB Dave has four starters who are once again led by a lone QB1, Trevor Lawrence. The quality behind him has a lot of potential but some uncertainty. Is Love all you need or is it actually Aaron Rodgers the Packers need? Should he have traded Dak for Jimmy G who's broken foot is now at the magnificent Las Vegas Raiders? Is Mac Jones any good?

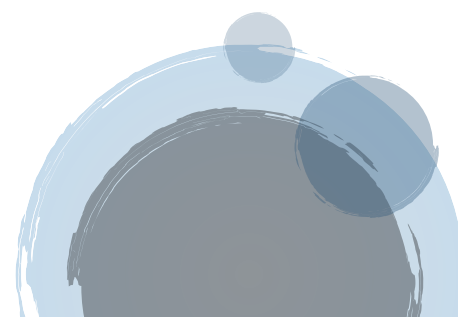

It's looking a bit better at RB with one RB1, Nick Chubb, backed up by two RB2 and three RB3, Dave arguably has one of the strongest RB cores in the league. When Dave won previously his strength at RB was consistency and depth. He seems to have reverted to that winning formula so let's see if lightning strikes twice.

If you're looking for a weakness in his team, WR may be it. It's not that bad though with three WR2s and two WR3s there's definitely worse WR rooms but there's no one elite to get him over the line when push comes to shove in the playoffs. If his team was in the MFC it would have no hope. As he's in the LFC it should be enough but will it be enough to push his team to glory again?

Another potential weakness was Dave's TE room. However, the move on from an aging Matthew Stafford for Darren Waller may have been a masterstroke to compete with Mike in the LFC.

He has also planned pretty well but weeks 9 (vs Alex), 10 (vs Rich) and 13 (vs Mike) potentially being a bit of an issue.

With a quality and depth in the most positions, Dave is certainly going into the season stronger than last year. He should make the playoffs this year thanks again to the conferences and with a good serving of luck could be a dark horse with a shot at the belt.

8. Inch by Inch (Rich - LFC) – 4th Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
74	7 th (6 th)	6 th (-1)	4 th (+3)	66 (-8)	7 th	7 th

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
5 th	=3 rd	9 th	=8 th	4 th	=3 rd	9 th	=7 th

Last years' LFC runner up is up next and it's fair to say it's looking like a bit of a mixed bag. He managed to avoid the replication of Gareth's year two last year and halted the 'No Trade Experiment' trading Cousins to Lee for a couple of second round picks which led to a foray in the playoffs. Will Dudders' good fortunes continue? Projections wise it looks like it may be another middling year but as last season goes to show, if you get a ticket you could win it all.

His QB core is middle of the road and has a mixture of youth in Fields the running superstar QB1 and experience in Rodgers who is a QB2. After that is the true superstar of this team who is chronically underrated by 'the experts' as a QB2. He is, former Mr Irrelevant and winner over three first round picks Trey Lance, of course it's Brock Purdy. Hiding on his taxi is his fourth starter and more youth in Sam Howell. Pretty decent but not amazing.

It's a different story at RB. And it's not a nice fairytale where the princess gets her Prince Charming. No, it's more of an Exorcist. It starts with a RB2 who almost didn't stay on the Rams roster, Cam Akers. An RB3 in a committee who can't beat out an old man is up next in AJ Dillon. We then have an RB4 and two RB5s none of which are their teams RB1. It's looking grim here and if Akers falls out with McVey again it could be looking even rougher.

The highlight of Dudders team is his WRs led by his three WR1s: Devonte Adams, AJ Brown and Jaylen Waddle. After that it's a lot of youth and hope.

As with many teams, Dudders' team suffers from the dearth of quality at the TE position. He does have a TE1 in the mix (Njoku) then a few TEs which would make great additions to a bestball lineup. A trade or massive breakout (from Sam LaPorta?) is needed here to be competitive on a weekly basis.

He has planned fairly well with bye weeks but week 10 against Dave may be a bit tricky.

There are a range of outcomes for Mr D where all of his players stay fit and he makes another run in the playoffs. There is another possibility where a couple of injuries hit in key areas and he takes the Golden Turd off the present Loser of All Losers.

9. J J F J (Lee - MFC) – 3rd Place

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
100	1 st (3 rd)	1 st (-)	3 rd (-2)	100 (-)	1 st	1 st

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
8 th	=7 th	1 st	1 st	1 st	=1 st	6 th	=5 th

We move onto last years best performing regular season team and MFC runner-up. It's very nearly a juggernaut that surely can't be beaten. Ranked first overall by the experts and the infallible JR™ is there any hope of us beating him? There might be an Achilles heel – let's see if we can find it.

Oh, here it is. Lee's QB core is by far the weakest area of his team and the worst QB room in the MFC. We'll see later examples of the inverse and the power that has. He doesn't even have a QB1 to rely on in his ranks. He does have three QB2s; two consistent performers in Derek Carr and Kirk Cousins and, the youthful Kenny Pickett at his beloved Steelers. He does have a fourth starter who is an RB3 but he's going to need to take a massive leap forward at the Falcons to keep that job next year. Oh and he's still got Trey Lance hanging around.

From that disaster zone, his RB room is now an area of absolute strength. The average tier of his whole RB room is better than the average tier of the top players of Alex, Gareth, Rich and Ross and is equal to Mike's! He has four RB1s including THE RB1 and RB2! Who wouldn't want CMC, Ekeler Jacobs or Pollard on their team never mind all four of them. Backing them up are three RB2s which gives him some decent depth when injuries inevitably hit. It's making me ill even typing this so I'm moving on.

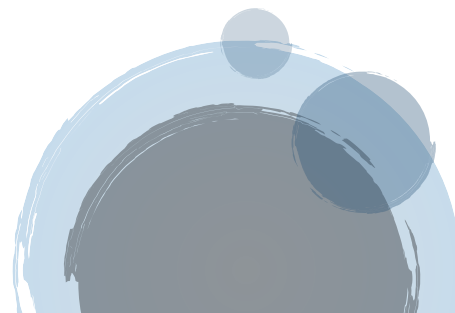

His WRs are a bit of a tale of two halves. The first half are his team's identity with his young and exciting WRs, THE WR1 and WR2 in Jefferson and Chase along with another WR1 in the Sun God. Half one complete. Half two is a couple of WR4s and three WR5s. What they all have in common is youth and their suitability to be in a bestball team. If anything happens to one or more of his top talent then Lee might find himself with a less than dominant side.

Lee has a solid TE in Dallas Goedert but perhaps not one who can provide a weekly positional advantage. Perhaps he should've kept Travis Kelce if he was serious about championship runs?

He has planned pretty well with perhaps two concerning bye weeks at 9 and 13, against Chris and Ross, respectively.

Lee's team is probably the team to beat this year and perhaps beyond. He's also invested heavily in this team without any first-round picks until 2025. Has the perfect plan come together or will difficulties at QB or an injury to one of those brilliant WRs derail his second shot at picking up that belt?

10. Tompa Bay Bucs (Mike - LFC) – Runner Up

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
90	3 rd (1 st)	2 nd (+1)	2 nd (+1)	80 (-10)	4 th	2 nd

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
1 st	1 st	5 th	5 th	3 rd	=3 rd	3 rd	1 st

Last year's runner up and LFC champion let down the JR™ by coming second but I'll forgive him this one time. He's firmly in the top four and has quality across the positional groups and is lacking quality competition from the rest of the LFC.

With the strongest QB lineups, Mike can boast THE QB1 and 2. Beyond that he has yet another QB1 in Tua. Now Tua is no certain thing since he even considered retiring because of those concussions but maybe that martial arts training will help him fall properly and not on the back of his head every time? He has nothing beyond that but if you have three QBs why would you?

Mike's RB core has lost the some of the strength it has as it did last year. Those three stout RBs, in JT, Swift and Montgomery are now an RB1 who doesn't want to be on his team; an RB3 stuck in a committee; and, an RB2 who may not even be his teams RB1. At least Dameon Pierce has moved up the ranks to be an RB2. Beyond those four, a wasteland. Mike's hopes seemingly sit on the shoulders of Jonathan Fucking Taylor but where will he play?

Mike's WR core is the best of the rest with two teams mopping up the only four tier one WRs. He has two WR1s in Diggs and Metcalf, a WR2, a WR3 then a whole load of nothing? Is this another chink in Mike's well assembled team's armour?

The future is Kyle Pitts but is the future now or will it take the Falcons a bit longer to utilise their unicorn TE to full effect. He does have THE TE3 as a backup though so much like his QB room he seems to have an untouchable advantage here.

He has planned pretty well with just two fairly significant bye week clashes: week 10 (vs Gareth) and week 11 (vs Rich).

Mike's certainly got the quality in every position group to make a play for the belt. Are there enough chinks in his armour for there to be an actual competition in the LFC or will Mike consider trading out of some of those blue chip assets to strengthen in those areas of need? I know a team with some RBs who needs a QB....

11. Raiders of the Lost Yard (Jebus - MFC) – Champion

2022				2023
Power Ranking	Prediction ECR (JR™)	Regular Season Finish	Overall Finish	Power Ranking	Prediction	Jebus Ranking™
90	2 nd (2 nd)	3 rd (-1)	1 st (+1)	88 (-2)	2 nd	3 rd

QB		RB		WR		TE
FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™	FP	JR™
3 rd	=5 th	2 nd	=2 nd	2 nd	=1 st	2 nd	=2 nd

Last but most certainly not least is your noble Commissioner who also just happens to be the reigning champion. Does his team still hold up to his hither to dominance or has the championship window closed on his side? His side is certainly the most consistent, top three in every category but let's take a closer look to see if there's any weaknesses to be exploited.

Well here's weakness number one. Whilst his team boasts two QB1s, his newly acquired backup in QB3 Baker Mayfield leaves a lot to be desired. Will Lamar and Dak finally have a season where they can stay injury free? Will Baker Mayfield be the Bucs new saviour? Both of those are probably no.

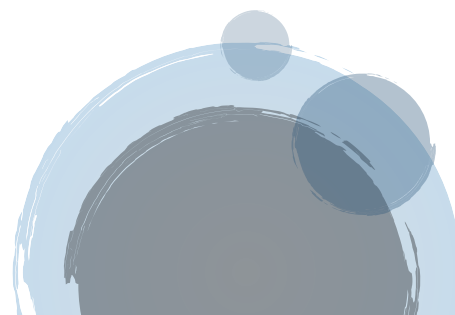

The RB room is a different story and an improvement in terms of previous years lack of depth. Two RB1s in Saquon and Mixon and three RB2s are basically the room. After that, nothing. Almost literally.

After a step back in his WR core last year, this year it's taken a step forward. He's added Cooper Kupp to Tyreek Hill as his WR1s and Keenan Allen has been added to his WR2s with a bit of backup in a WR3 and a WR4. It blows the lower teams in the MFC, and obviously the LFC, out of the water.

Having THE TE2 in a rejuvenated passing offence could again give Jebus some weekly positional advantage. However, his depth is skin deep and an injury to Andrews could derail his season.

He has some significant bye week clashes in weeks 10 (vs Ross) and 13 (vs Rich).

Like Aaron Rodgers, Jebus may feel he wants to cement his legacy by adding another ring to his collection. But like Rodgers his team isn't getting any younger with his off-season additions adding to the problem. It looks like it's now or never to win again as these players are going to age out soon and it looks like future Jebus is going to have a major rebuild on his hands.

12. Conclusion

Well done for making it this far. May I be the first to congratulate Lee on winning his first belt and retaining it within the MFC.

Don't take what I've said too much to heart. What do I know? Maybe do take my rankings a bit more to heart than the experts but given both levels of inaccuracy I would take them with a pinch of salt. There's still time now and in season to change your fortunes – whether that's to win this year or beyond.

In any case, enjoy the highs and lows of another Dynasty season and remember: in the end there can be only one glorious champion.