

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2026 Rookie Draft Preview

I. Introduction

We made it through another season with our resident allegiance swapper, Mike, winning the Championship for himself and the LFC for the first time! With our draft in a couple of weeks, it is the time of hopes and dreams. When people value free agent movers such as Malik Willis, Kyler Murray and Kenneth Walker as actual commodities. And injury plagued players like Jaydyn Daniels, Patrick Mahomes and Daniel Jones could somehow shake off the injuries and become productive once more. Or players traded to dramatically different situations can somehow become great like Waddle, Michael Pittman, DJ Moore or David Montgomery [Spoiler – you'll all be terribly disappointed].

I thought it would be helpful to do a little review of all the teams. Is your team as good / bad as you think? Where might people need to draft some young blood to improve their team. Will you need to trade up to get your man? Does the draft matter at all and can you trade actual players to improve your team?

All these questions will not get answered and there will only be numerous other questions like: is our Commissioner deluded he will ever compete again? Is Chris' team finally good? Which team does Mike support? One thing that is for sure – a few of us need to update the out-of-date team names / branding.

II. Rule Changes

This year we have not agreed to a number of changes of rules as we let the changes of the last few years settle in. What we did agree was:

- The introduction of three additional IR spots from the 2026 season on.
- Minimum Engagement Standards
 - Have Sleeper notifications on during the offseason
 - Respond to trade requests within 10 days (unless on holiday or other reasonable reason)

III. 2026 Rookie Draft

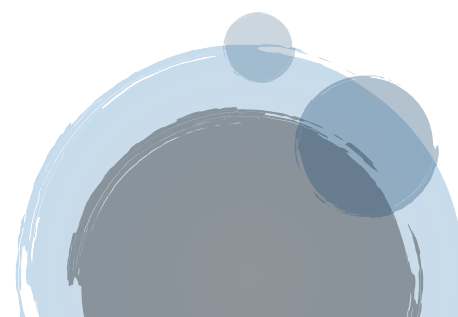

The draft board (as things stand) is in the table below:

Pick	Round 1	Round 2	Round 3	Round 4	Round 5
1	Gareth	Neil	Ross	CHRIS	Neil
2	RICH	RICH	Dave	RICH	RICH
3	GARETH	Jebus	GARETH	GARETH	Mike
4	NEIL	NEIL	NEIL	NEIL	NEIL
5	Ross	Ross	Alex	JEBUS	JEBUS
6	Ross	ALEX	ALEX	ALEX	ALEX
7	ROSS	ROSS	Gareth	ROSS	ROSS
8	DAVE	Ross	DAVE	DAVE	DAVE
9	Dave	Ross	Mike	LEE	LEE
10	Jebus	Chris	Gareth	Neil	MIKE

All caps denotes own pick

Last year's draft was decent but there was no particular winner – except for Chris of course. While this draft is not as strong there are still some aspects and players worth your careful consideration. There was a QB who went at the top of the NFL draft but we may not see the very high fantasy ceilings of past years. As always there's a lot of QB needy teams in the JADL so could we see some movement in the first round? There's not a strong RB class but the WRs look good with two or three standout prospects and another potential 'generational' RB talent? There's a good few teams who need WRs and are, presently, at the top of the draft so could we see another team 'do an Alex'? The TE class is decent again with a couple of outstanding prospects.

Unlike the last draft, there are three GM's dominating the first round. Gareth has the all-important 1.01 and pick 3! Ross has the middle draft covered with three picks. Dave has the end covered with two picks. They all hold some keys to how the draft will fall. Unless they trade it all away? For the first time in some time, there is no one conference dominating the first round. Both teams have five picks apiece but the top 3 are all held by the LFC. If we look a bit deeper Ross has really committed to this draft being the key to his future success with a third of the first 24 picks! What a draft class to choose – the self-proclaimed 'rookie whisperer' will need to be on top form to try to replicate Alex's actual rookie whispering performances at the '23 and '24 drafts.

IV. 2025 Elite Players

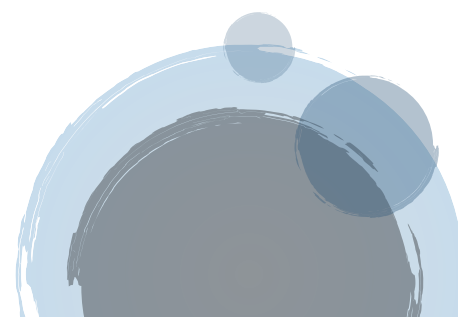

For a bit of context to some of the descriptions below I've included this table setting out how many elite players each team has. For QB, RB and WR this is any player in the top two Expert Consensus Ranked tiers. For TE it's the top tier only.

	QB	RB	WR	TE	Total
Alex	2	1	2	2	7
Chris	2	0	1	1	4
Dave	0	2	0	1	3
Gareth	0	0	0	1	1
Lee	0	2	3	0	5
Mike	1	2	1	0	4
Neil	1	1	0	0	2
Ross	2	1	1	0	4

V. [Way too early] Points Projections

For a bit more context, I've added Sleepers projections in the table below. It's great to see how competitive the LFC has become. This is the first time the LFC has ever led on points in every category and overall!! Are we about to see a season of LFC domination like the MFC so far? I'm sure the MFC will be very gracious about any change in fortunes.

Tier	Team	Con	QB	RB	WR	TE	Total	Rank

It's been four years since the end of the no trade experiment and it seems the damage may be starting to be overcome. The previous multiple high 1st round picks seem to have had little impact on the Mandos prospects but maybe that tide is turning. We've moved from deep clarets across the board to oranges and even a smattering of green long-term and for '26. Picking in the top two for the fourth consecutive year and the third pick too, Gareth is presented with some intriguing options. There's an exceptional RB, WRs galore and another shot at a QB (and a LV Raider at that!). Not sure that's going to fix everything but at least he can decide his own adventure. It may be a while that he stays in the doldrums though, with the prospect of winning the Championship a faraway dream. But maybe now he can dream?

Gareth's QB room did get an addition last year thanks to a very shrewd trade for Tyler Shough for a 2nd/3rd pick swap! Passing up on Drake Maye, Jayden Daniels and Bo Nix the year before unsurprisingly keeps him near the bottom of the QB rankings. Not quite bottom though. Who has the worst QB room you ask? Well, you'll find out soon! Back to the Mandos, who only have two starting QBs maybe adding another one this year could be a good idea?

RB is another position with youth on its side. What it has in youth it possibly lacks in real quality. The room 6th in dynasty rankings and 8th for '26. He picked up two RBs last year, including Omarion Hampton. Gareth has the opportunity to add some Love to this room for quite a formidable RB room. Is he at the point in his team's cycle to be investing in RBs though?

Another position group, another area of need? His WR core picked up in recent years with the additions of Marvin Harrison Jr, Ladd McConkey and Ricky Pearsall but it is still 6th in dynasty and 7th for '26. There are green shots of recovery in this room and plenty of choice to add to it if he so desires.

At TE we have a similar story in terms of rankings at 6th in both dynasty and '26 but his starter is the exceptional Colston Loveland who ended the season very well. I'm not sure there's a top 3 worthy TE to pick up this year but maybe he might fancy moving up for one in the later rounds?

Given how poor the Mando's QB room is and lower ranked starters elsewhere, it will come as no surprise that they are also bottom or near the bottom of the Superflex category. Surely this draft can only improve this?

VII. Pick #2 – Inch by Inch – Rich – Lombardi Conference

4.75	8	9	4.82	9	9	8	9	10	9	9	2	5	10	10	7	9	5	10

Onto pick two and it's the second LFC team. Two consecutive bottom four finishes resulted in some top picks but thus far they've not led to his return to the top four again. Quite the opposite. 8th in dynasty and for '26, Rich is continuing his rebuild. In fairness he does have one high but quite a lot of lows. There's a few needs to fill with only one pick 1st round pick. Perhaps he could trade to improve his situation?

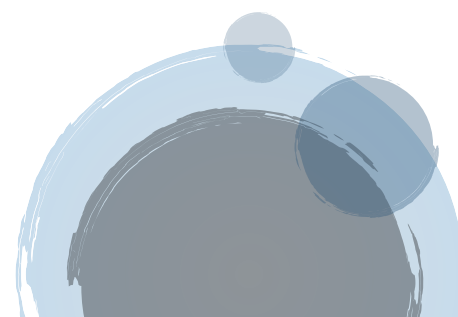

Last season, Rich's QB room had four starters! Alas, the passage of time and the shaky foundations have cracked which is reflected in a 7th ranking in dynasty and 9th for '26, with just one starter. He could well be back up to two again if the ayahuasca user returns to the Steelers. Picking at 2 and the consensus being that Love is the number 1 prospect from this draft, perhaps Rich'll be in position to pick up yet another QB at a draft.

Rich's RB core is somehow not the worst in the JADL. The stiff competition from another teams means he is 9th for dynasty and '26. The main problem with improving this room – aside from a lack of willingness to trade - seems to be that there's not a lot of RBs in this class to improve. Short of Gareth passing on Love at no. 1, this draft capital may well be better spent elsewhere....

....Like his WR room. Once again just one team saves him from being the absolute basement dweller. Devante Adams isn't getting any younger and his younger prospects don't seem to be prospects anymore. The good news for Rich is that he may well get the opportunity to take his pick of the prospects at this draft. I hope he chooses wisely.

In a complete shift from the rest of his team, Rich has the second youngest and best Dynasty and '26 TE room. He has strength and a bit of depth but given we've got two flex spots, could picking up another TE help provide a bit of stability to his side? Maybe a trade up to pick up another one can help fill up those flex spots?

Onto superflex and even the worst team in the league can't save Rich from being the basement dweller here. The lack of quality at QB as well as virtually everywhere else gives him nowhere to hide. Needs that 2nd pick to be a blinder to move up these ranks.

VIII. Pick #4 – Canton Giants – Neil – Madden Conference

4.03	6	7	4.45	7	3	5	6	7	8	7	9	9	6	6	5	5	8	10

At four is the first of the MFC teams. Neil's team had remained stable keeping an overall dynasty ranking of 8th for a fourth straight season but with changes within the MFC we'll touch on later has rocketed up to 6th! Neil hasn't made the playoffs since the formation of the conferences but maybe this could be his year? He has some good players a couple of which are elite and he maybe has a chance to add another if things break for him. Neil's got a very young team which has needs more or less across the board but there's green shoots of hope with four picks of the first 24 – there's a possibility to improve things again.

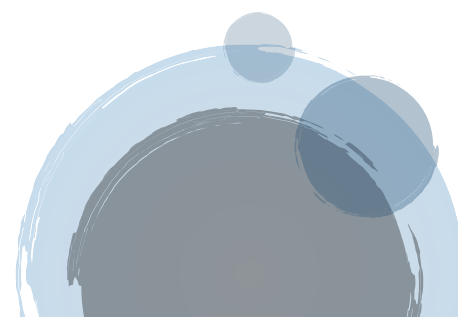

Neil's QBs are ranked 6th in dynasty but third for '26 thanks to a very smart pick of Dart and the reigning MVP. Neil's pretty settled here. Maybe he'll get the chance to add Mendoza if he drops and forget about his QB room for a decade or so? Building around QBs is not the worst dynasty strategy in the world, eh Lee?

It's not a dissimilar story at RB. Ranked 4th in Dynasty and 6th for '26 – middle of the pack but room for improvement. Devon Achane and Hubbard were shrewd acquisitions but he could probably do with an addition or two to add depth. Not the draft class for that. Maybe he can sell something to Dave for magic beans and a RB?

There's quite the drop off at WR though. Ranked at 8th for Dynasty and '26, the temptation must be to take one of the several WRs on offer at 4. It's not all bad though and if only the Jets could play football Wilson could be his elite asset. This is the class to pick up some WRs and he's got the draft capital to trade back into the first if he wants to.

Next up is Neil's yo-yo TE Room. Worst to third and back down to 9th again! Kittle injuring his achilles in January casts doubt over his availability this year and Neil is gifted with backups. Maybe a TE is what Neil really needs?

At superflex we have 6th for '26 and 7th in Dynasty. The QB room is doing some heavy lifting but he needs more from the rest of his team to bump him up these rankings.

IX. Picks #5, #6 and #7 – The Rookies Nest – Ross – Madden Conference

4.88	9	6	4.63	8	3	1	5	5	6	5	10	10	4	3	1	1	5	5

Next up we have another MFC team with Ross. He successfully took the 1.01 last year and has three consecutive picks in the first round this year. At 9th for '26 the 'first time' phrase may be the first of many as he's 9th in dynasty rankings too. There's a very special reason for this as the sharp eyed may have seen in projected points or the unique colour in the table above. For a 'rookie whisperer' he's got an old team so the injection of youth is much needed. The question is – can he actually pick a decent rookie when he's not the 1.01? Or maybe he should just move on from the inappropriate name?

Ross' most obvious strength comes at QB but the gloss has come off what was two elite starters. Josh Allen is still the QB1 but he's still not got a true WR1 and Herbert's offence now seems to be that good ol' ground and pound game. He could trade one of his big two for a king's ransom and set his overall team up to be a top competitor but he'd need a QB in return because he doesn't have shit after those first two players. A conundrum that seems like it will never be resolved - that one early belt may be the only time he ever gets to hold it. Josh must be pleading to get onto a team that could genuinely contend for something...and I'm not just talking about leaving the Bills.

At RB Ross' team is bang average. 6th in dynasty rankings and 5th for '26 means he's got to do something to make a push to win that championship again. Unfortunately for Ross, he'd need the 1.01 again to do that with this draft class. But it's not impossible for Ross to take a RB with one of his 1st round picks. It's not like he's got a history of over-drafting RBs to great success.

A similar story at WR. Ross got a haul of picks for Ceedee Lamb but that's obviously impacted on his ranking. 6th for both dynasty and '26 an influx of talent is required to push for contention in the MFC. As noted before this is the draft for WRs but I'm not sure there's going to be enough to go round.

At TE Ross has just that a TE. As in one. But there's more. That TE is over 30. And doesn't have a contract with an NFL team! What's more is the data used for the famous JEBUS Rankings™ doesn't actually have his TE – Jonnu Smith – in the rankings for 2026. So the 10th ranking is kind of nominal. But wait there's more. The smug bastard was so confident he was going to pick up a TE with one of his three 1sts that he deliberately put himself into this situation for a third round pick. Then the fucking JETS draft Sadiq! You couldn't make this up! Absolutely glorious. Anyway, it goes without saying that Ross needs at least one starting TE (but probably two in reality) before start the season or he'll be losing a pick every week! Keep an eye out for inbound trades looking to snap up a TE and weigh very carefully what they are worth to Ross!

Moving on and we're back to mid table for Ross. While he does have a very decent QB options outside of that are a little.....lacking.

X. Pick #8 and #9 – breecetie boys – Dave – Lombardi Conference

At picks 8 and 9 we're back the LFC teams. It's a team holding its own largely based on one part of its team. Ranked 3rd in dynasty but 4th in '26, he's at his usual upper mid-table spot. While Dave did win the LFC last year he once again failed to make it to the Championship matchup. An improvement though he will be looking to build on before this team get too old to compete.

Dave's QB room is still around the middle of the pack in dynasty rankings but there appears to be some concern amongst experts that this room isn't looking great for this year; he's ranked 6th in JR and 7th in ECR! He certainly needs not worry for the start of the season – he has four starters as things stand, well assuming Daniel Jones can stand in September. It's probably looking a bit worrying for 2027 but Dave can worry about that then I guess. While he has four starters I'm not sure they're the ones you'd all be shouting about if they went on the trade block though. If he really want to push on and win the Championship he might want to consider an upgrade or two. Not sure he's finding those in this draft.

Dave's RB core has maintained its top ranking for dynasty but dropped to second for '26. He's still got two elite players in Jahmyr Gibbs and James Cook. They're backed up by his team sponsor and Bucky Irving so it's a great core and full of youth. A sub-25-year-old core adds to the positives. However, what does the rest of his team look like?

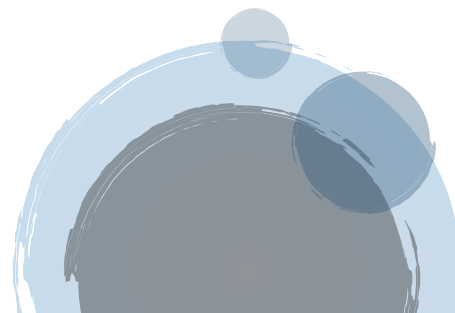

The WR core could perhaps do with an injection of youth. 6th in Dynasty and 4th for '26 it's not a bad group. But he has no elite players which could be a problem if he wants to seriously compete with Alex, Mike or the top MFC teams. There's WRs in this draft but are they available at 8 and 9? Could we see yet another trade from Dave to improve this room?

TE is a difficult position to crack but Dave has taken advantage of the recent influx of quality TEs. While Kincaid has turned into a bit of a flop, Dave snapped up Tyler Warren and Mason Taylor at the last draft. At joint second for Dynasty and '26 rankings, Dave probably doesn't need to waste any picks here.

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2026 Season Rookie Draft Preview

At superflex, his lacklustre QB room along with lack of elite WRs leaves Dave middling at 5th for Dynasty and '26. Maybe he'll get lucky at the draft and improve that ranking? Maybe he'll just trade with Neil....again.

At pick 10 – and not the last on this list - is your former back-to-back-to-back champ and Noble Commissioner. But how the mighty have fallen, eh? What used to look very green is now quite a stark red. And to make matters worse the creditors have called in those credit card debts and he doesn't even have a high pick. It looks like it will be a struggle to make it back to the dizzying heights of before. Perhaps some long-term thinking might have been a good idea after all? At 10th for both Dynasty and '26 rankings it going to be a tough rebuild for the once mighty force in the JADL.

What was once a QB room the envy of the league, trading away Baker at the end of last season as well as Lamar in the last week, it's not what it once was. It's still not the worst in the league of course. He traded Lamar for a much younger model in Caleb Williams and Dak is still around but there's not much else. He's now at 7th in Dynasty and for '26 and will need to add to this group to provide a secure future. It's unlikely he's doing that with the 10th pick.

Another story of selling up assets at RB. Bijan went with Baker for a haul of picks and a DB so is no longer there. Saquon went the same day for another '27 first. So what's left is decrepit or over the hill. Well not entirely – I'm sure he's got strong hope in a New England RB who continues to inexplicably share a committee with drop prone Rhamondre Stevenson. Now ranked the absolute basement for Dynasty and '26, it's probably going to be a long while until we see this improve. Certainly not with this '26 draft class!

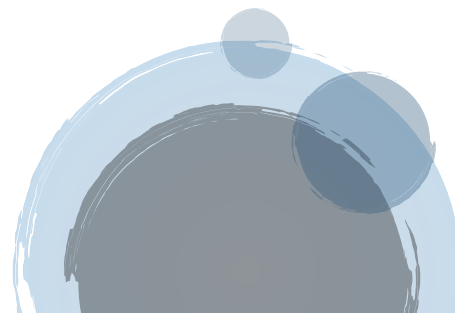

A similar story at WR. His WR's have either aged out or been traded for picks. Ranked rock bottom for dynasty and '26, it's not looking very rosy and picking at 10 all those top WRs in this class will be gone. It's an area where an injection of youth is long overdue. It's genuinely sad that he's going to still be fielding Tyreek Hill, Cooper Kupp, Hollywood Brown and Keenan Allen like it's 2021 all over again.

Jebus' TE core is a slightly different story and one Ross could only dream of. We've all heard of two TE sets. Well it looks like Jebus will be playing three TE sets given the atrocious state of his roster. This is not to say his TE room is good. It's just not as bad as the rest of his team. It's ranked 7th for dynasty and '26 and filled with players on new teams and of course old vets.

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2026 Season Rookie Draft Preview

Jebus is lucky that he still has a couple of good QBs propping up his team otherwise he'd be bottom of the rankings here too. He nearly is in Dynasty terms at 9th but has a relative high of 7th for '26. I don't think the 10th pick is really going to move the needle here either.

We're now outside the 1st round and onto the teams that have sold their futures in the hopes of winning big. First up we have LFC pretender, Alex, the real Rookie Whisperer. While Alex made the final two years ago and is the favourite once more, his team let him down last year – finishing in 3rd in the LFC and 5th overall. As things stand he's the no. 1 ranked team in both Dynasty and '26 and just one step away from green across the board and surely the Championships will follow.

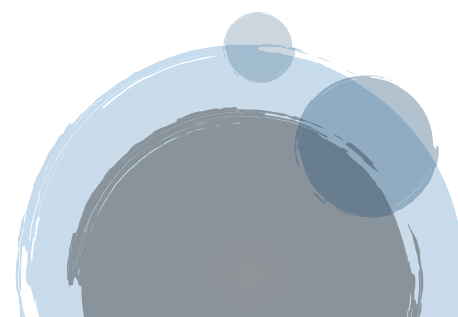

Arguably Alex's best room came from a single draft in 2024: Drake Maye, Jayden Daniels and Bo Nix all went to Alex! With an average age of 25 (including Geno Smith!) he could be set for a decade or more. It's no surprise that he's got the top ranked room for Dynasty and 2nd for '26. I'm not sure Mendoza is dropping to pick 16 anyway.

Here's the chink in the armour. The only truly light green on the page where he's 3rd (7th in ECR) for dynasty and a 'lowly' 4th (6th in ECR) for '26. An obvious area of need that somehow wasn't fixed by last years' RB draft class. He will be gutted he doesn't have more draft capital in this class because if he could somehow wrangle the 1.01 from Gareth, maybe he'll be the next team to three-peat?

Alex's WR room is the youngest in the JADL and second only to one man in Dynasty and two in '26 rankings. Just because you have two elite WRs doesn't mean you don't need more though. Will Alex be tempted to add to this formidable room from this '26 class?

Once more, Alex's TE core is amongst the youngest and is the best primarily due to one Mr Brock Bowers. If anything dreadful were to happen to Brock he also has Tucker Kraft. I don't think he'll be drafting Sadiq on the Jets.

At superflex it's no surprise that Alex is 1st for Dynasty and joint 1st for '26. With all those elite QBs, WRs and TEs it's not really a surprise, is it?

Next up is the penultimate MFC team with Chris and his Felons, sorry Falcons. Less than a week ago Chris would have appeared much lower in this list but he traded back into this draft and got himself pick 20. All it cost him was Caleb Williams, Wandle Robinson and his 2028 first. He may also have got AJ Brown and Lamar bloody Jackson in return too. Was the trade worth it and what should he do with that pick? He does habitually trade in-draft so maybe he has a surprise up his sleeve too? I'll keep that in mind as we go.

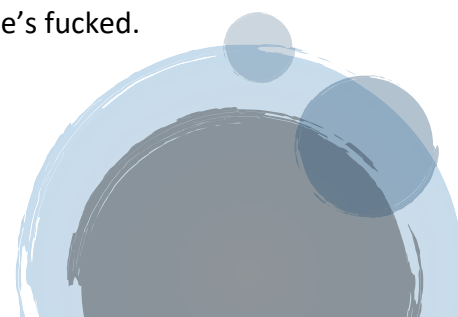

The perpetual builder seems to have finally made the moves to make him an actual contender. Look at all that green for 2026 putting him 4th in dynasty and 2nd for '26. With the oldest side it may be now or never though!

Even though he retains the services of the teeny-towelled-twat, Chris' QB core has improved since last year moving to 2nd for Dynasty and 1st for '26. He first added Caleb courtesy of Neil and upgraded him for Lamar. Add him to Joe Burrow and a potentially rejuvenated Kyler at the Vikings and its no surprise this is the no. 1 QB room.

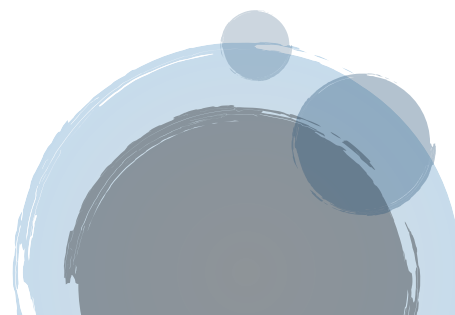

Like our number one overall ranked team, the chink in the armour of this team is RB. Chris' RB core has had a bit of an offseason bump with Kenneth moving to the Chiefs. King Henry is somehow ageless. After that it's a bit 'hope and dream' based leaving him 8th for Dynasty and 6th for '26. Perhaps his surprise trade is for the 1.01?

Onto Chris' WR core. It's an interesting one. It's a mixture of youth and experience young and ranked 3rd for dynasty and '26 with one elite player. He's got London, Tee Higgins, Pickens and AJ Brown who might be able to cover his flex spots that would otherwise be taken by a RB. Injuries might be a problem though. Will this room finally meet its potential and bring home Chris' first ever fantasy Championship?

At TE Chris looks to have one of the most secure and elite TE rooms. Ranked joint 2nd for Dynasty and '26, just behind Alex again. In McBride he might just have the TE one. If he gets injured then he traded for Goedert (from Ross – hahaha) as a decent backup. If they both get injured he's fucked.

Onto superflex, that elite QB room with a smattering of elite talent at each position, Chris is a solid 3rd for Dynasty and joint 1st for for '26.

At pick 29 we have the last of our LFC teams and our reigning Champion! Mike's identity crisis may be over but has his prospect of retaining the title? This time last year Mike was an Eagles fan and projected 2nd behind the Toolsy Prospects. There was a fear of a slide into obscurity but he went balls deep picking up Bijan and bolstering his QB and WR rooms with Baker and Evans. Despite this he's ranked lower at No. 3 overall for dynasty and '26. He still got a great team with high hopes to make it back to the LFC Championship game again. As there's not been too much churn in players it's starting to get a bit older but now ranked 8th overall. With a lack of top draft picks his competing window will only be open for a limited time. At least he finally won the Championship and doesn't need to incorporate the Bills into his team name.

His QB core has maintained its place near the top of the rankings at 3rd for Dynasty and '26. He must be conflicted with beloved Jalen Hurts and Baker Mayfield both competing with Patrick Mahomes for spots in his starting lineup. He's also got Super Bowl winning Sam Darnold as further backup. No need to spend that pick 29 here.

At RB Mike's team sits at 2nd for Dynasty and top of the tree for '26. He's got Bijan, JT, Kyren Williams, TD king Monty and Swift who somehow has a backfield all to himself right now. He probably doesn't need to use the 29 pick here either.

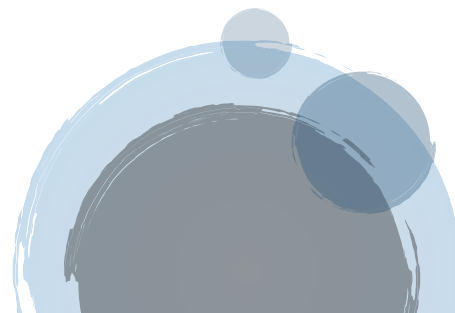

WR remains Mike's weakness (as well as his loyalty issues). At 4th in Dynasty and '26 it's a downgrade on his competitors. We know he can throw a fifth-round pick at some random kid and turn them into a gem. Is there another Puka in this draft? Is Puka going to be able to behave himself in the next four months to avoid suspension?

Mike's TE core is confusing as it is the one area of his life where he is displaying deeply-seated loyalty. It paid off last year with outstanding performances from Kyle Pitts which took him to the final. He's got a couple of competent backups which somehow also makes him joint 2nd for Dynasty and '26 too. Maybe he can find that 5th round gem here?

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2026 Season Rookie Draft Preview

Last but not least we have the superflex category. With a good QB room and elite talent elsewhere its no massive surprise to see Mike in the top half of rankings, 2nd for Dynasty and 3rd for this year.

Last but not least we have our final MFC team. It's the Boy Scouts or Letterwang, or JJFJ or something. I know Mike has an identity crisis but sheesh, he's not alone, is he? In any case, last year Lee finally broke through the glass ceiling in the MFC and made it to the Championship game only to find another ceiling blocking his way. Was that Lee's final shot at the title? Not long ago he was sitting pretty with a pretty green looking board – except for one position of course – but now it's not looking so hot. His overall standing has slipped to 5th for dynasty '26. While others have made moves for QBs, he's also dropped from the top of the projected scores down to 5th and is closer to Neil than he is to Alex and Mike. That age profile of 9th ain't looking pretty either. That being said he's assembled this team through some very smart draft picks and trading away his future 1sts but with nothing to show for it yet. He's got some excellent assets though so maybe with a bit of trading and moving around the draft he can move back up the ranks?

The first core we look at is always QB. Maybe you should skip to the next paragraph Lee, this isn't going to be pretty. He certainly has more starters than many but the standard is much lower, leaving Lee 7th for Dynasty and 9th for '26 rankings. This is an improvement on last year but is more reflective of the moves of teams around him than a tangible improvement in personnel. To me, it's clear where Lee has fallen short these last couple of years while the rest of his team was incredibly strong. Whilst several teams he's competing with have more than one top 12 QB he has maybe one on the fringe. Barring a move dramatically up the board to grab Mendoza, this room isn't improving in this draft. In honesty, is adding Mendoza actually an improvement?

While Lee's RB isn't what it used to be, it's still 4th for Dynasty and '26. He's got some very consistent performers who are getting older and he added Saquon at the end of last season. Most importantly it contains a certain Mr Christian Jackson McCaffrey. If you have him – and he stays fit – you have a chance of winning any week. There may be another RB gem in this class he can draft with that fourth-round pick?

Once more, Lee's WR core is top of the tree and he can smugly relax knowing he's got the best WR core. With three elite assets in Jefferson, Chase and the Sun God and more WR1s in his pocket he has a strong foundation to put up points week in week out. However, is he so heavy in this area that maybe he should consider strengthening his weaker needs elsewhere? He definitely doesn't need any additions here in the draft but that's not stopped him from adding to this room before. It is 9th in age profile now so maybe an injection of youth is needed?

A different story at TE and perhaps much more like his QB problem. Lee's had Kelce for a few years now but that hasn't brought home the bacon and new and exciting TEs have entered the league pushing Kelce down the rankings. His room is now 9th for Dynasty and 8th for '26. Can Kelce have one last hurrah or will he need to see if he can draft a gem at the draft? He might need to trade his way out of this pickle for when the inevitable Kelce retirement comes.

Last but not least is superflex and, yes, you guessed it, that desperately bad QB core pushes what could otherwise be an excellent ranking down to 8th for '26. It's looking better for dynasty at 4th but ECR has him down in 8th. This draft seems unlikely to fix that but maybe a trade or two can help?

XVI. Conclusion

Have I been too harsh? Not harsh enough? Are the rankings actually worth the data they're saved in? I hope I have inspired some contemplations of rosters which will result in some great trading before, during and after our draft on 15th May at 8pm. I'm very much looking forward to our sixth rookie draft which hopefully will be 100% in person once again and Neil being at everyone's beck and call. I'll be doing my best Goodell impression with the offer of big hugs all round.

One final ask – it's that time of year when I ask for subs. So can you send me £30 if you haven't done so already, please.
