

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – Startup Draft Review

Attendees: Jebus (Commissioner), Alex, Chris, Dave, Dudley, Gareth, Lee, Mike, Neil and Ross

I. General

There's clearly some Eagles fans in the league as the most picks came from that team with 11. This was followed by the Chiefs and the Saints with 10 and 7 teams with 9 picks.

Chris is clearly a Falcon's fan as he had a high of 4 players from the Falcon's. Rich picked the only free agent in the draft, future Seahawk, Antonio Brown.

Wide receivers were the most popular pick with 87 of them being picked off the board. Rich picked up 11 of them and Neil only 6. Some trading may be in order between the two of them as Neil picked up the most running backs and Rich the fewest.

No one except Ross was interested in defences and kickers which picked up a mere 12 and 11, respectively.

The dynasty league's 'Andy' is Dave who has hoarded 6 QBs.

The average age of a roster was 25.6 years old. It will come as no surprise that Ross has the youngest roster with an average age of 23.3. The oldest member of our dynasty has obviously been attracted to the older players with an average age high of 27.4.

When we look at the top ten picks the picture is a little different. The average age of the top ten is 25.3 and we can see that Ross is again building for the future with an average age of just 22.7, over a year younger than the next youngest of 23.8 (Neil). It will come as no surprise that the win-now mentality of Mr Newbrook has produced an average age of nearly 28, this average held down by rookie Joe Burrow.

II. Hot Chubb Time Machine (Alex) – Pick #1

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Cardinals
4	9	8	2	25.9	26.4	25.6	3

Picking from the #1 spot, it is unsurprising that the 2019 stud RB, Christian McCaffrey, ended up on Alex's team. Alex's first four picks were across all four offensive positions which allowed him to pick up the number one dynasty TE, George Kittle.

Alex has a league power ranking of 98 (of 100) which puts him second in the league for this season. He has top 5 positional picks at QB, RB1, TE, Flex and Superflex. However, picking across positions so early has left Alex weaker at wide receiver. Expect some trade offers to fly in once he realises that his WR core is killing his gameweeks.

Alex also appears to have no faith in this rookie class, picking up just one rookie in the draft. He also doesn't seem enamored with veterans only picking up two over 30: Fitzpatrick out of necessity and his meaningless kicker.

III. Bad Mother Tucker (Dave) – Pick #2

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Chargers	Seahawks
6	7	8	2	26.8	26.7	26.9	3	3

Picking from the #2 spot allowed Dave to pick from 'the best of the rest', picking up Saquon Barkley with his first pick. Dave went RB heavy with his first four picks, only Dak Prescott encroaching on his penchant for running backs. Dave isn't a big fan of TEs it would appear as he waited until the 9th round to pick his TE. He loves a QB though.

Dave has a league power ranking of 97 which puts him third in the league for this season. He has with top 5 positional picks at QB, RB1, RB2, Flex and Superflex. However, picking RBs so heavily has left Dave weaker at wide receiver and tight end. Expect some trade offers for WRs and TEs if he really desires winning the championship belt (or if you need a QB).

Dave also appears to have a little faith in this rookie class, picking up three rookies in the draft although none are likely to make an impact this season. He loves a veteran QB picking up: Tyrod Tylor (31), Stafford (32), Roethlisberger (38) and Brady (43)!

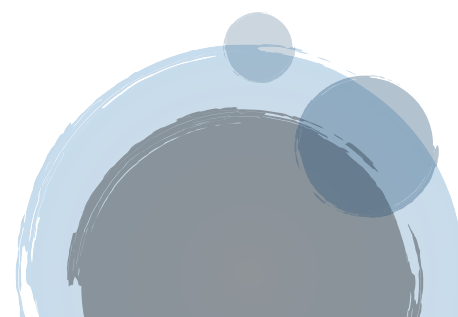

IV. Tompa Bay Bucs (Mike) – Pick #3

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Colts	Washington
4	7	8	4	25.5	23.8	26.8	3	3

The top two RBs gone Mike went for Patrick Mahomes as his first pick. If Tua Tagovailoa makes a mark in Miami, Mike will have his QBs locked in for the next decade! After Mahomes, Mike alternated between RB and WR providing a fairly balanced starting roster. Mike also didn't start as fan of TEs as he waited until the 7th round to pick his TE. He picked up four in the end though!

Mike has a league power ranking of 80 which puts him ninth in the league for this season. He has top 5 positional picks at just QB and WR1. Picking alternate RB and WRs has left Mike weaker at all positions except QB. With an average age of 23.8 in his first 10 picks Mike is clearly looking to the future. If he wants to win now, he'll need to make a broad range of trades.

Mike appears to have a lot of faith in this rookie class, picking up seven rookies in the draft, three in his top ten picks. He'll need them to make an impact this season to be in with a shout of the playoffs. It really was a draft of two halves for Mike as he had the greatest differential in age between his first ten picks and remaining 15. He has picked up two veteran WRs to cover for his faith in youth, although AJ Green needs to show he's over those injuries.

V. Jurassic Chark (Jebus) – Pick #4

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Ravens	49ers
4	6	9	4	25.3	24.2	26.0	3	3

“What an outstanding draft from the Commissioner” is what I would have liked to say here. Unfortunately that has not been the case. The Commish picked last years’ outstanding rushing QB as his first pick. This was followed by two RBs and one WR. He didn’t wait too long to pick up his TE with last years breakout TE filling that roster spot at pick 5.

Jebus has a league power ranking of 92 which puts him seventh in the league for this season. He has top 5 positional picks at QB, RB2, TE and Superflex. However, picking RBs so early has left Jebus weaker at wide receiver. Jebus is likely to be active in the trading market if he can find a willing partner.

Jebus also appears to have little faith in this rookie class, picking up just one rookie in the draft. He also doesn’t like veterans with no player in their 30s (or 40s) on his roster. He must be looking to the future to hold that championship belt.

VI. Canton Giants (Neil) – Pick #5

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Rams
3	10	6	4	24.0	24.1	23.9	3

With the consensus top four picks gone, Neil was left with a decision on how to approach the draft – he decided to ignore the Superflex format and went RB, RB, WR, WR. Those first two RBs look strong and he may be the first person not to need major upgrades in the WR department. Neil also didn’t start as fan of TEs as he waited until the 7th round to pick his TE. He picked up four in the end though.

Mike has a league power ranking of 88 which puts him eighth in the league for this season. He has top 5 positional picks at RB1, RB2 and WR2. Going heavy on RB and WRs has left Neil weaker at the QB and Superflex spot. With a scarcity of starting QBs some serious compromises in trading will be needed to improve his QB stack.

Neil has some faith in this rookie class, picking up three rookies in the draft, one in his top ten picks. Like Jebus, Neil has no interest in veterans with his eldest player being 27. He is certainly looking to the future to hold that championship belt.

VII. Team Dudders79 (Rich) – Pick #6

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Packers	Eagles
4	5	11	3	26.7	26.1	27.1	3	3

Rich was the first to take, perhaps by necessity, a WR heavy start to his draft. His first pick was Ezekiel Elliot but from there it was all WRs. He too ignored the Superflex format, not picking his first QB until the seventh round. He didn't wait too long to pick up his TE, picking Zak Ertz at pick 5.

Rich has a league power ranking of 93 which puts him sixth in the league for this season. He has top 5 positional picks at RB1, WR1, WR2, TE and Flex, matching Alex. However, picking WRs so heavily has left Rich weaker at QB and Superflex. With a scarcity of starting QBs and an abundance of in-demand WRs Rich may expect some trade offers coming his way.

Rich has some faith in this rookie class, picking up three rookies in the draft, two in his top ten picks! He picked up a few veterans, most notably his 25th pick, one Antonio Brown. If he can find a franchise willing to tarnish their reputation, Rich will have more WRs than there are roster spots.

VIII. Buffalo Bill Oddie (Lee) – Pick #7

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Saints
4	6	10	3	24.6	25.4	24.0	3

As we get further down the first round picks the shorter the supply of stud RBs. The solution – pick Michael Thomas – a WR in a league of his own. A hesitant drafter, milking all the time in every pick, Lee's first four picks were indecisive across all four offensive positions. This did allow him to pick up the number one TE, Travis Kelce. Unbelievably he managed to pick up Deshaun Watson mid-way through the fourth round! More on that extraordinary circumstance later.

Lee has a league power ranking of 95 which puts him fifth in the league for this season. He has top 5 positional picks at WR1, TE and Flex. However, picking across positions so early has left Lee weaker at running back. Unless Josh Jacobs starts getting some targets or Fournette starts picking up TDs, he may need to consider trading some of those WRs for RBs.

Lee was keen on the mid/late draft rookies, picking up four in rounds 17 thru 20 although none are likely to make an impact this season. He picked up just one veteran and appears to, like his pick, need some laser eye surgery as he picked up Jameis Winston. When he starts you should consider streaming defences against him.

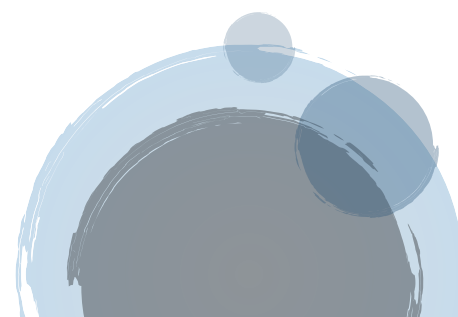

IX. Run Cam Run (Ross) – Pick #8

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Bills
2	7	8	4	23.3	22.7	23.8	3

Where do you start with a draft like Ross'? Unlike his team name Ross had a very WR heavy start to his draft. His first picks were Tyreek Hill and Chris Godwin but he did pick up an RB1 and QB in the next two rounds. He waited an eternity for a TE, waiting until the 9th round to pick one up.

Ross has a league power ranking of 62 which puts him bottom of the league for this season. He does have top 5 positional picks at WR1 and WR2. However, picking rookie WRs so heavily has left Ross weaker at QB, RB, TE and Superflex. If he hits with those rookie WRs though he may find he can correct his roster pretty quickly.

Ross believes that the 2020 rookie class is the future of the NFL. He picked up 10 rookies, half in his top ten picks! Unsurprisingly, he didn't pick up any veterans. Could Ross be the GOAT in a few years' time or has he spunked his load on a bunch of mediocre rookies. Literally only time will tell.

X. Team ChrisNewbrook (Chris) – Pick #9

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Falcons	Bengals
2	7	10	3	25.6	27.8	25.6	4	3

How do you follow a roster like Ross'? Apparently by doing the complete opposite. Like Neil, Chris also went RB, RB, WR, WR, although Chris' choices were 8 years older than Neil's. Those first four picks look strong but Chris appeared to be taking a 'win now' approach (as had been suggested in the pre-draft chat). This sense was strengthened by his following 3 picks which included 41 year old Drew Brees. Chris may have forgotten about a TE as he waited until the 11th round to pick his one. Of course he went for 31 year old Rob Gronkowski.

Chris has a league power ranking of 95 which puts him fourth in the league for this season. He has the most top 5 positional picks including RB1, RB2, WR1, WR2, Flex and Superflex. Aside from an aging team which will need refreshing, Chris may be looking to ram home his positional advantage by trading up his QBs and TEs.

It will come as no surprise that the win-now mentality of Mr Newbrook has produced an average age of nearly 28 in his first 10 picks, this average held down by rookie Joe Burrow. But it was very much a draft of two halves for Chris who knocked over two years of his average age with his remaining picks. He picked up 5 rookies which don't need to perform well this season but may need to come good soon or Chris will need to pick up some much needed additional rookie draft picks. Could Chris have pulled off a master-stroke of drafting or has he spunked his load on a bunch of over the hill veterans in a desperate attempt to win the first championship. One thing we do know, if we had started the dynasty in 2015 Chris would be the reigning 4 year champion.

XI. Radyr Raiders (Gareth) – Pick #10

QB	RB	WR	TE	Average age			Popular team (s)
				Total	First 10	Second 15	Eagles
3	8	9	3	27.4	25.7	28.6	3

Not only did the elder statesman of the league have to contend with being the last pick, he also had to pick the bones of the previous two contradictory drafters. Gareth embraced the Superflex format and went RB, RB, QB, QB. It is a strong start but how you can pick up back-to-back QBs with Deshaun

Watson available and opt for Carson Wentz is an interesting option. Has senility set in? Gareth also didn't start as fan of TEs as he waited until the 8th round to pick his TE.

Despite picking Wentz over Watson, Gareth appears to have made a strong draft in power rankings terms. From spot 10 he has achieved a league power ranking of 100 which puts him top of the league for this season. He has top 5 positional picks at QB, RB2, WR2, TE and Superflex. At 10 it's not surprising he doesn't have stud RB1 and WR1s and if he wants these he may need to consider trading to solidify that top rating.

Gareth clearly dislikes the young and has only picked up one rookie. What a rookie though, Clyde Edwards-Helaire is supposedly the top prospect of this rookie intake to make an immediate impact. Veteran Gareth was keen on his kin picking a league high of seven veterans. Whilst Chris may have made a more obvious win-now draft, Gareth certainly isn't far behind him.
