

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2024 Dynasty Review

I. Introduction

Firstly, thanks to nearly everyone for getting together at Draft HQ for a very enjoyable evening. Special credit must go to Dave for his marvellous hosting and BBQ. We made it through our fourth Rookie Draft relatively unscathed and I think it's safe to say there were some surprises (Brooks at 6!?)!

In a change from the past couple of years, this is going to be a bit of a review of the draft and where our teams stand in the long term. There'll be another update shortly before the draft looking at the 2024 season and relative prospects there.

II. 2024 Rookie Draft

The draft board finished as the table below. GMs highlighted in green indicate the value of the player selected was greater than the value of the pick (according to KTC). Those in red indicate where the players value was less than that of the pick:

Round 1	Round 2	Round 3	Round 4	Round 5
1. C Williams QB Neil	1. B Nix QB Alex	1. J Polk WR Ross	1. J Baker WR Lee	1. J Cowling WR Neil
2. M Harrison Jr WR Gareth	2. L McConkey WR Gareth	2. B Sinnott TE Gareth	2. T Tracy RB Lee	2. L McCaffrey WR Jebus
3. D Maye QB Alex	3. B Thomas Jr WR Alex	3. M Penix QB Gareth	3. R Wilson WR Dave	3. C Stover TE Alex
4. J Daniels QB Alex	4. K Coleman WR Chris	4. J McMillan WR Ross	4. B Allen RB Neil	4. E All TE Chris
5. M Nabers WR Alex	5. T Benson RB Neil	5. J Burton WR Gareth	5. T Franklin WR Dave	5. M Washington WR Dave
6. J Brooks RB Ross	6. R Pearsall WR Gareth	6. X Legette WR Alex	6. T Johnson TE Neil	6. B Irving RB Dave
7. JJ McCarthy QB Rich	7. B Corum RB Rich	7. W Shipley RB Rich	7. D Walker WR Rich	7. J Thrash WR Rich
8. R Odunze WR Alex	8. A Mitchell WR Lee	8. S Rattler QB Dave	8. I Guerendo RB Lee	8. R Ali RB Lee
9. B Bowers TE Alex	9. M Lloyd RB Chris	9. K Vidal RB Gareth	9. J Sanders TE Mike	9. J Travis QB Mike
10. X Worthy WR Chris	10. J Wright RB Chris	10. M Corley WR Chris	10. R Davis RB Lee	10. A Estime RB Lee

Jessica Alba Dynasty League – 2024 Dynasty Review

There was no surprises with the first five picks then Ross decided that his team need outweighed common sense, best practice and player values and went for a second round running back with the 1.06. This gave Alex the opportunity to pick up Odunze as well as Nabers and a trade up to get Bowers too! After that everyone more or less made the right choices until the highest KTC reach of the draft with Lee taking Tracy with the 4.02. At that point you might as well get your guy though and he seemed pretty sure that people would catch up that this was a great pick. We'll see.

Before I analyse each team, the order of teams will appear by team who has done 'the worst' as a result of the NFL and rookie drafts and who has done 'the best'. I've defined this by the change in overall Jebus Dynasty Ranking™ (JDR) from April to August.

ECR – Expert Consensus Rankings from Fantasy Pros

KTC – Keep Trade Cut

III. Falcons – Chris – MFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
25.62	3.56	-0.37	7	7	10	7	8

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
27.57	4	5	4	25.61	7	7	7	23.71	5	9	4	24.70	6	2	6

First up it's the perpetual builder, Mr Newbrook, with a third of a tier drop of dynasty value across his team as a result of the draft and summer moves. He's stuck in the lower JDR rankings, average team age but that basement KTC value must be scary for someone who's not made the playoffs since year 1.

Chris' draft went better than last year as he actually had picks and he made not one, but two trades in draft – one of which taking him back into the first round! I don't think it was drafting players that put Chris first on the list but more the aging of his RB room and complete absence of backup TE.

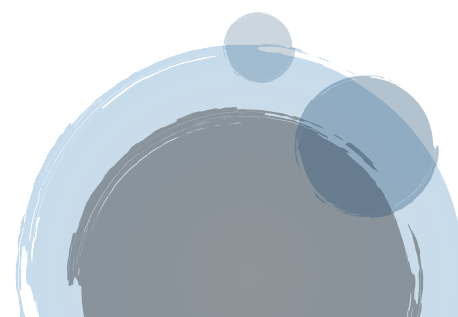

Chris' QB room is clearly his main long-term strength. Will the teeny-towelled-twat finally get back to where he was when he was when he was (allegedly) sexually assaulting various massage therapists or was that his secret power?

At RB he's 7th across all the rankings with that age curve hitting hard. He's added the backup Packers RB who might help him next year but good luck finding dynasty value elsewhere. If only Chris took Bijan instead of Walker...

Both his 1.10 and 2.04 were spent on WRs but, thus far, it doesn't look like it's done anything to improve his WR prospects as his rankings are unchanged and are 9th if you ask the much-derided experts. At least it's a young room, eh?

At TE, his one top tier TE is keeping his dynasty value afloat. Let's hope he continues getting all those targets and doesn't become a blocker for MHJ.

So from a dynasty point of view it looks like Chris' team must be looking to compete in 2024 based on value and rankings. Or maybe it's time to 'rebuild'???

IV. Tompa Bay Bucs – Mike – LFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
26.01	2.54	-0.23	1	2	1	1	1

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
27.34	1	2	1	25.25	5	3	5	25.21	2	3	5	25.04	1	6	2

Next up is the first team from the LFC and the top dynasty value team! He did lose value, a quarter round per tier, but that doesn't look to have done him any real harm. Worryingly for the rest of us he also has the highest draft capital! His team does seem to be getting older though so there's a silver lining he won't dominate being the runner-up forever.

Mike didn't end up having a pick until the fourth round since he traded out of his 1st for my 2025 1st and 2nd (with Alex, I obviously didn't own these picks myself)! He did take a TE (Bowers went with his 1st) in the fourth and also made his annual random QB pick.

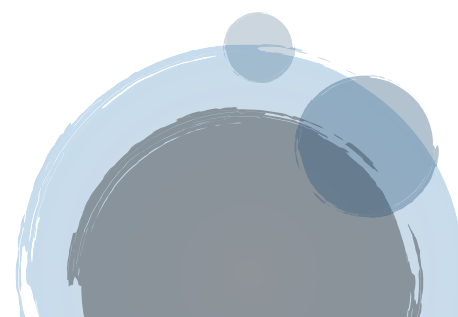

With Mahomes, Hurts and Jaren Hall, Mike's obviously got the No. 1 dynasty QB room. He's always adding more QBs and maybe he'll get lucky again and keep this ranking for years to come?

At RB he has a middling squad although KTC seems to think he has one of the better ones. With an average age of over 25, it seems like the only way is down the ranks.

Mike's WR is back near the top again according to the infallible Jexus Dynasty Rankings coming in 2nd but KTC values tell a slightly different story. At 5th in KTC value it looks like the market and experts aren't in full agreement. As Mike rarely trades, this probably doesn't matter too much to him.

Mike has previously drafted a TE at number 3 overall and it looks like his patience has paid off with his now No 1 ranking. Good things come to those who wait but the experts suggest that at 6th he may need to keep on waiting.....or maybe cash in?

Back to back championship games and top dynasty rankings. What can you say about the team that seems to have everything? Oh, but he doesn't have everything does he!

V. Raiders of the Lost Yard – Jebus – MFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
27.76	3.44	-0.11	5	5	9	5	9

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
28.82	4	4	5	25.09	2	2	3	30.23	8	10	10	28.34	6	3	4

We're back in the MFC again with our final loser from the draft is your noble Commissioner who lost a 10th of a tier across the team 'as a result of the draft'. More likely this is the continuing aging out of the oldest team in the league. Despite this he's somehow mid-table in dynasty rankings but his team seems to be increasingly worthless according to KTC.

Our Commissioner made just one pick after he traded his 4th round pick for a '25 3rd. What he didn't quite realise was that pick would somehow be worth a starting QB and a third!? That unique trading relationship between Dave and Neil shining through once again.

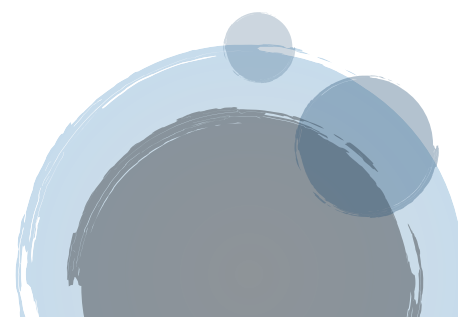

With last year's resurgence of Baker Mayfield, so comes the increase in QB rankings for our Commissioner. But was it a flash in the pan or can it be sustained even though Dave Canales has moved to the Panthers?

Jebus' RB room are nearly the top of the league (and mid-table for age) very much thanks to a significant investment in one Bijan Robinson last season. Take him out and it's possibly the oldest and lowest value? Well maybe not worse than Rich's.

A bit of a different story at WR. This is where the aging out of Jebus' team really shines through. 8th in dynasty ranking and 10th in value. These WRs aren't going to last. The time to sell up those older productive assets for some youth and picks may have passed. Who will even start for this team in 2 years?

Different story again at TE for Jebus. Lower middle of the pack in JDR but near the top in ECR. One thing this room isn't is young.

Classic dynasty contending team issues for our Commissioner. Some pretty low dynasty and KTC value players who've been productive enough to pick up rings the last two years. It looks like it's not long until he's going to need to pay off that credit card he's been charging this team to. At least he still has his '27 1st, for now.....

VI. J J F J – Lee – MFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
26.51	2.90	0.00	2	3	4	2	10

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
31.49	10	10	10	27.40	2	5	2	24.96	1	1	1	32.08	3	7	7

Next up is another MFC team and this time it's ~~Letter Wang~~ Lee. Second to Mike once more but that age is creeping up. No change to his team value though. Not sure what this means about the 7 picks he made in the draft. Mind you the vast majority were in the 4th and 5th rounds.

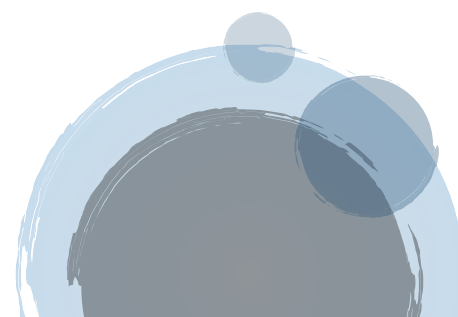

It's not the lack of picks alone that puts Lee in second. Oh, no, it's another influx of rookie QBs pushing the meagre value of his present ones even further down. He's now rock bottom in every metric. Old, bad and worthless. I wonder if he'll ever make a move here?

At RB, the old tag remains firmly in place, just like his QB room. Different story in quality though. He's 2nd in JDR but middling according to the experts. Plenty of sale value to boost that QB room though.

One place Lee has no problems is WR. Middling in age but the total opposite of that decrepit QB room. With three, yes three, tier one WRs surely this is an opportunity to tier up a QB before one of them gets injured or bad QB play dissolves their value?

At TE he's bagged his third oldest average age awards but, like his RB room, it closer to the top in rankings.....unless you ask the experts or the market. Then it's not so good.

So another top side which is aging a bit too. Oh, and did I mention how bad that QB room is? Jesus. Just look at all that red. I'm sure it'll be fine though. If only there was a meme (not a 'me me' Gareth) that could represent this...

VII. One Flew Over the Rookies Nest – Ross – MFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
26.00	3.29	0.06	4	4	3	3	7

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
27.50	3	1	2	24.48	6	6	6	25.25	2	2	2	28.27	8	9	10

Our first winner and it's the MFC's very own self-proclaimed rookie whisperer. Using his prestigious talents and three top 24 picks he managed to move his team an enormous, no sorry miniscule.....1.8%. His increasingly aging team is still ranked 4th but it carries slightly higher trade value, particularly when you factor in that relatively low draft capital.

He blew up the draft with his pick of PUP listed Brooks at pick 6 much to the delight of Alex. I guess it might increase competitiveness in the LFC so there's that silver lining. He took two rather meaningless WRs at picks 21 and 24. Maybe that rookie magic will pay off with one of those. Seems unlikely since he hasn't actually hit on a rookie since the maiden draft.

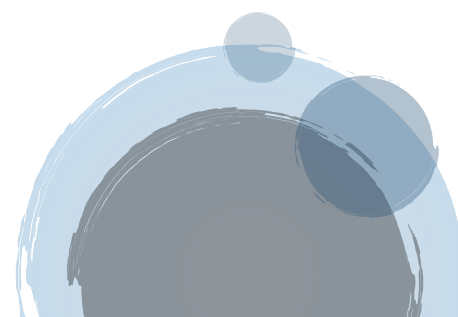

Ross' QB room continues to be his best asset ranked 3rd in JDR but first according to the experts. KTC has Herbert and Allen some of it's most valuable players so he's safe here or got room to upgrade other areas of his team.

RB seems to be a bit of a problem spot for Ross. Young but bottom half dynasty and value ranks, he's got to be hoping Brooks was worth passing on McCarthy, Odunze and Bowers.

This WR room is great though and more than makes up for his deficiencies at RB though, right? Er, well, quite possibly yes! After Lamb and Aiyuk's good showings in 2023, He's up to 2nd across the board. Will that hold true when Aiyuk gets traded though?

At TE it's a pretty tough looking story since he traded Kelce for the very inconsistent Goedart. His age profile has gone down but he's now in the bottom three rankings and absolute basement of value. Maybe he would have been better trading down for Bowers???

You could be mistaken for thinking Ross' team is in a rebuild or at the tail end of a competing window. I'm not sure either is true. Middling mediocrity it is.

VIII. Mac to the Future – Dave – LFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
25.10	2.98	0.08	3	1	2	4	5

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
25.43	7	7	6	23.70	1	1	1	27.19	6	8	8	24.96	3	4	5

Next up we're finally back in the LFC with another team that made a tiny increase in dynasty value even though all his picks were pretty late. Smack back in the middle for age and top 3 in all metrics including 1st from the experts, Dave must be pleased with where he is.

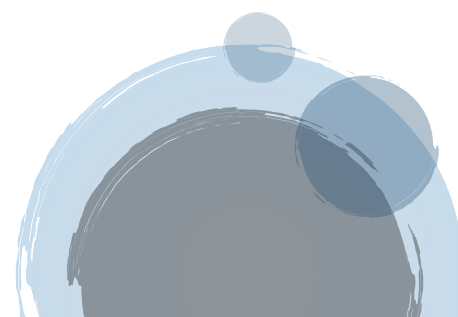

Much like the highest ranked MFC team we start with a below par QB room. It's not as bad as Lee's and has youth on its side but coming in at 7th isn't exactly top contender quality.

Next up is Dave's RB room and its second to none. Youngest and top across the board. It's no wonder he's willing to down tier here to improve his WR room.

That oranges aren't good reading at WR. Getting old and low expert and market value. The JDR gives a little better picture but it's still bottom half. Anyone need a RB?

An above average but again unspectacular TE room. It's not getting any younger but an average age of about 25 is exactly old now, is it. Are they any good though?

Not unlike Ross' team, looking at the dynasty ranks it's hard to say if Dave is heading to compete or in a spot to rebuild. If he improved that QB room somehow then the young RBs and old WRs might make it seem like the competing window and finally a challenge for Mike could be on the horizon.

IX. Inch by Inch – Rich – LFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
25.39	3.67	0.18	8	9	8	8	6

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
24.71	7	9	9	25.22	8	10	9	26.13	2	4	7	24.31	1	1	1

Next up is another LFC team carefully managed by Rich. While the team has increased by a fifth of a tier it feels like it's a carefully managed decline. His appearances in the playoffs perhaps more down to the lack of quality in the LFC rather than anything else. Bottom three in every meaningful metric and lower half draft capital is not great reading.

He's improved his team through the draft before so I imagine he's hoping that he hits on McCarthy and Corum but that might require some patience.

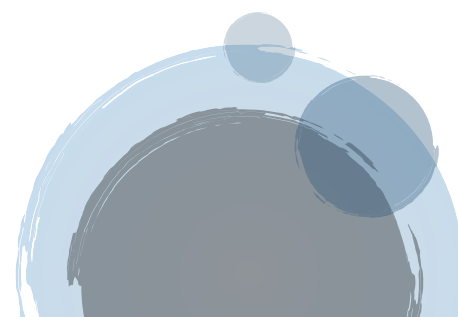

At QB, Rich's young room doesn't necessarily reflect dynasty value. The JDR of 7th seems generous when set against what the experts say and KTC only has the room valued above Letter-Wang.

A similar story at RB, relative youth mainly from his depth pieces, with little to no dynasty value. It's grim reading once again and not from a competing team.

A much better if very confusing picture at WR. Relatively old, 2nd for JDR, 4th according to experts and 7th in market value. I'm so very confused what this means. Some good players but old? Some bad players but young? I don't get it. Hopefully the next report on 24 outlook will set the record straight.

At TE it's a completely different story. Young and the top rated room across the board. If there was an area where he could improve his obvious deficits then this is it. Shame he doesn't trade much.

So will Rich carry on with the decline or will the trading restart to improve his dynasty or '24 outlook?

X. Mandos – Gareth – LFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
22.90	4.33	0.42	10	10	7	10	3

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
22.68	6	6	7	24.21	8	8	8	22.82	8	6	6	22.95	8	10	9

Third place in the winner's enclosure is Gareth and his Mandos. His whole team moved up nearly half a tier from just this one draft. Sadly it has not shifted him from the basement in rankings but at least he has the youngest team with an average age under 23!

Not as many first round picks as last year but still five in the top 24. It's hard to say what impact most of his picks will have on his team, it can't make his team worse, I guess. The most importantly was probably his first pick and that 'generational' talent in Marvin Harrison Jr. The rest who knows, maybe one will be good?

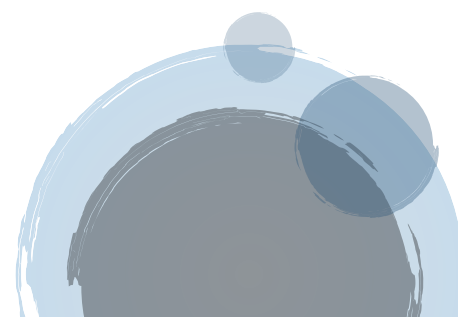

Last year's additions of Bryce Young and Anthony Richardson have contributed to the youngest QB room in the league but they haven't yet lived up to the high draft capital invested in them. A lower half ranking and even lower trade value has him a bit behind the curve but it's a drastic improvement on the basement dweller he used to be. You wouldn't want to be bottom of the QB rankings in a superflex league!

At RB Gareth is clearly still in rebuild mode, picking up mainly WRs and QBs in the draft and at 8th, not any likelihood of picking up any major points. Nice and young and maybe with an injury he could trade someone in? Maybe 2026 he might focus his draft capital in this area?

Despite the investment in MHJ, Gareth still ranks 8th overall! It's the youngest room but Christ how bad was it before MHJ joined!?

TE is another spot where Gareth once again has the youngest core and added to it with the second TE off the board. Alas, that again hasn't improved his rankings which vary between 8th and rock bottom.

Los Mandos have once again made all the right moves to stay competitive at the '25 and '26 drafts. It might be a long old build but he has some solid ground with a couple of young QB and MHJ. I hope it works out for him.

XI. Canton Giants – Neil – MFC

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
24.22	3.52	0.73	6	6	6	6	4

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
23.59	2	3	3	23.77	2	4	4	25.00	10	7	9	30.35	8	8	8

Our draft runner up and last of the MFC teams is Neil. It was another tough year last year for Neil where he had a winning record but just missed out on the playoffs. However, it meant that he could pick up one of the top QB prospects at this. CJ Stoud and Caleb Williams does not right now seem like a bad QB room. Despite an increase of nearly three-quarters of a tier at every position, he's ranked across the board at 6th. With some decent capital left. Nice young team too.

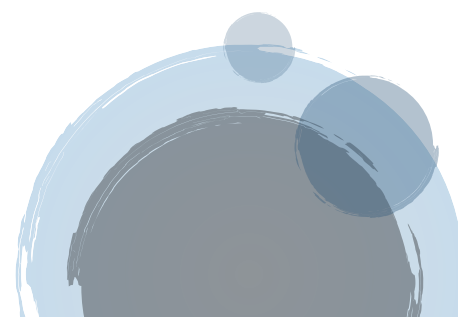

Onto that aforementioned QB room which will come as no surprise as second in age and overall ranking. He's seemingly set for the next decade. Unless he wants to improve the other less desirable parts of his team. I know one team which needs a QB or two.

At RB it's another success story in what so far feels like a competing team. Youngest RB room, second in overall value, it's all coming up Canton giants so far.

And then the success story stops. Rock bottom in dynasty rankings and middling in age is his WR room. Maybe he should've taken MHJ? I wonder if there's a team with some good WRs who needs a QB?

At TE, despite the very wise trading away of Waller and picking up of George Kittle, Neil remains in the doldrums. With this comes his worse age profile. An injection of youth and quality seems necessary to bump him up the rankings.

It's another team where it's hard to say where it stands. The season preview will tell us more but it's been a good couple of drafts for Neil. Finishing outside the playoffs has its benefits.

XII. Toolsy Prospects – Alex

Overall							Draft Capital
Ave Age	JDR Score	Change	JDR	ECR	KTC	KTC - DC	KTC
23.31	3.92	0.87	9	8	5	9	2

QB				RB				WR				TE
Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC	Ave Age	JDR	ECR	KTC
24.02	7	8	8	24.94	8	9	10	22.55	6	5	3	23.97	3	5	3

Last but most improved from the draft is Alex and his freshly rebranded Toolsy Prospects. Picking up literally half of the first round has moved his team up not far off a whole tier at each position! Alas, that still leaves him in 9th but he's mid-table on KTC value and is still second on draft capital! Maybe this will suit Alex and his team build.

He used those top five picks to capture two of the top three QB and WR prospects. Not a bad day's work. He also picked up the top TE for a second draft running!

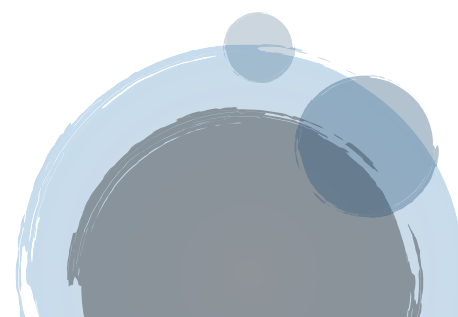

Despite the QB additions, he's only moved up three places to 7th and is somehow still 8th in KTC value. Seems like more additions here might be necessary...or the Pats to actually be good. The former seems more likely as I type this.

At RB, the sale of Bijan puts him back down the rankings at 8th. Also only having four in total isn't massively helpful and contributes to that 10th KTC value.

At WR, Al is much improved at 6th and now youngest overall and 3rd in value. A successful draft by most measures (not overall quality of course).

At TE he's pretty static from last year where he's swapped Kincaid for Bowers. Keeping the room young and competitive.

The next review will be telling but has Alex drafted the foundation of a team that might actually start winning games again? Imagine Alex, scoring more points than another team, the last time you did that was 21 December 2022!

XIII. Conclusion

If you made it this far very well done. Well done to Alex, Neil and Gareth for coming away with much improved dynasty teams. Looks like there's some improvements to be made for others.

We have our free agent auction on 19 August, a reminder of the format for that is below.

Keep an eye on your WhatsApp and the Sleeper app. We're getting tantalisingly close to football being back and I know there will be trade offers coming back and forth.

Want to know your prospects for the 2024 season to try to stop a three-peat? A preview will be with you in the not too distant future.

Auction Process

There will be a maximum of 5 rounds with everyone having a pick in each round available if they need their 5 nominations. This means you will be able to add a maximum of 5 players to your roster. Each person will have 60 seconds to nominate a free agent of their choice. This will be an automatic bid of $1. As soon as the choice is made a everyone (except the highest bidder) will then have the ability to bid for that player. You may choose an amount to bid and enter it into the chat.

I'll then give a count to when the auction will end . If a bid does not appear in the chat by the time I have said gone (there is a delay so don't try to be too clever as happened last year).

The next nomination period will start.

There is no necessity to make any nomination, bid for players or use all 5 of your picks. You may be happy with your teams, have no roster space available, not see anyone available worth picking up or simply wish to save you FAAB for later in the season. Once the nomination process begins and you do not wish to make a nomination, you will need to inform me, either in the Zoom call, the auction chat or on Whatsapp that you wish to skip your nomination. I shall immediately skip the bidding phase, and the next nomination phase will begin.

To avoid an unnecessarily long auction once you have skipped a nomination you will not be able to make any further nominations in the auction. You will still be able to bid on players others have nominated.

Once all players have either skipped a nomination or filled their 5 spots I will bring the auction to an end.

Post Auction

Once the draft has ended and we finish our call, I will add the players you have won from your rosters and remove the amount of FAAB spent on players won in the auction. This may take a little time so please be patient.

If you are over roster limits after the auction you must drop a player you did not win at the auction to come back within roster limits. Once you are within roster limits you may drop any player you wish.

Any players left in free agency (or dropped in the intervening period) will next be available at the first waiver via the usual blind bidding process. The first waiver will be on Sunday 25th August. The next will then be the usual waiver process will from 4th September.